Missouri continues flu shots

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State health officials say they expect the number of persons seeking immunization for swine flu will drop off for at least a few days because of the deaths of a number of persons shortly after they received immunizations.

"It would be unrealistic to say 'No' to the prospect that the number will fall off, at least temporarily," said Jerry Giffen, information officer for the state program. "People are going to naturally be apprehensive about it now."

The fear that turnout will drop has already prompted health officials in Vernon County to postpone two immunization clinics scheduled for today and Thursday until next week.

Jerry Vineyard, administrator of the Vernon County Health Unit, said the action was taken because the developments over the past few days will probably limit the number of persons seeking vaccinations. Turnout for clinics in that area prior to this week has been good, Vineyard said.

In neighboring Cedar County immunizations stopped because that area ran out of vaccine.

Those closely involved in the Missouri immunization drive are continuing, however, to express confidence that there is nothing wrong with the vaccine and the deaths, primarily in the East, have only been coincidental.

"Everybody that I've talked to in the program from the top on down has no fear that there is anything wrong with the vaccine," Mrs. Giffen said.

While a decline in vaccinations is anticipated, there is still no intention of suspending the innoculation program here as has been done in 10 other states.

"We understand that it is being investigated by the Center for Disease Control and that it will probably turn out to be a relationship in time and no physicial relationship to vaccine," said Dr. H. Denny Donnell of the Missouri Health Division.

In an effort to "alleviate some fears" that have arisen because of the deaths of elderly people after they received the vaccine, program officials are working with statisticians to determine the normal death rate of elderly persons in Missouri. Mrs. Giffen said she expected those statistics to show the death rate of persons taking the vaccine to be no higher than normal.

The deaths of at least three persons from heart attacks came after they had been immunized from the same lot of vaccine. But officials said none of that lot of vaccine has been shipped to Missouri, where more than 150,000 innoculations have been given since the program began last week.

Sikeston's new steam plant

E. R. "Dick" Inman, director of municipal utilities, and City Manager Charles Church met Tuesday morning with reporters to discuss the proposed 235-megawatt steam plant.

The plant would be built with $250 million in revenue bonds which must be approved by local voters in the Nov. 2 general election. The plant is scheduled to be built on a 600-acre site on Compress Road, north of Malone & Hyde Inc.

When completed, the plant will sell electricity to 11 other communities, including Cameron, Carthage, Chillicothe, Columbia, Fulton, Hermann, Higginsville, Macon, Owensville, Trenton and West Plains. Power will be sent to those communities over Associated Electric Cooperative power lines.

Inman said the utility will build rail spurs from Missouri Pacific and Frisco rail lines to the new plant, so coal can be brought to the plant. The spurs will cost about $50,000 a mile.

"It seems to me that we have only two alternatives," Inman said. "One is the construction of the power plant project, or else purchase from an investor-owned utility."

He added that Beard of Municipal Utilities studies show construction of the power plant is the most feasible plan, with the purchase of power from an investor utility the most costly.

Inman, who had previously said the present steam plant on Compress Road would be shut down for good, was less specific Tuesday on the plant's future. He said the utility may mothball the plant with an eye toward reactivating it sometime in the future. Inman pointed out that in the 1980's power will be in short supply throughout the country and the old power plant could turn out to be a money-maker for the city.

The old diesel plant, 568 E. Center St., will be shut down, Inman said, and the engines sold. The building will be converted into storage which the boards needs.

The interview was taped at the Sikeston High School television studio and will be televised about 6:45 p.m. Friday, on Channel 6 of the See-Mor Cable TV system, immediately following a school system news program.

In the interview session, the question was asked, "When did the Board of Municipal Utilities first decide it needed a new source of electric power for the city?"

This started approximately three years ago when it was learned that the Southwestern Power Administration was changing its mode of operation from firm power supply to peak power supply.

We found we would be losing our firm power supply in 1986 when our contract expired with SPA. We were going to need quite a bit of power to replace that lost from the SPA.

We investigated five sources we thought would be available to us in this area. One of the sources was the city of New Madrid which has two large power generating stations. New Madrid has a block of power allocated from each of those stations, but it was learned that they would be unable to market power to anyone.

We contacted M&A Cooperative, which is located in Poplar Bluff, and they informed us they could not legally supply the power to a municipality other than on a temporary basis.

We went to the state power pooling commission, which is formed of a group of 14 or 16 municipalities that had the idea that we could all put a project together. The laws in Missouri would not allow it.

The only power source we have found that could supply an adequate power supply to us in the future years, and to take care of our growth, is Missouri Utilities Co. of Cape Girardeau. The company is willing to sign a 20-year purchase power agreement.

It's a much more expensive way to provide power to your system than self-generation, especially a large generation plant.

Purchasing power from Missouri Utilities would not be as expensive as a small generating plant that would just serve Sikeston's needs. But we went into it with the idea of building a large generation plant and marketing the excess to other municipalities.

At the last City Council meeting, you made the statement that this would be the largest municipal power plant in Missouri and the first in the state to sell power to other municipalities. People in New Madrid have taken some offense to that since they say they have already done it.

What I meant to say is that this is the first project in the state of this large a generating plant that is being built by one municipality and selling to a number of other municipalities.

The proposed plant will supply the city's needs through the year 2000. Beyond the year 2000 what will the city be doing for power?

Shortly before the year 200, we will have to be making plants for either additional plants or other sources of power to take care of our needs.

How will the power be transported to the 11 other cities and what happens to them when the power is no longer available?

We have had a meeting with the cooperative that has transmission lines to those communities and they have agreed to wheel the power to the municipalities and standby the plant in case of emergency breakdown or normal downtime for maintenance.

The cities know this is more or less a temporary power supply and will have to make arrangements.

The $250 million bond issue sounds like a lot of money to most people. What will it mean financially to the citizens. Will there be a tax increase?

The bond issue will be paid from the utility income. There will not be a property tax increase or other tax increases included in the proposal. The income will come from city customers and also from municipalities which have contracted to buy the power at our cost plus 10 per cent.

It has been said that at some point down the line we would have to have a rate increase.

That is correct. Our study showed that in building a plant this size, we would have to have a rate increase in 1980 and also in 1985. In comparing the rate increase for the purchasing of power from an investor-owned utility, it amounts to about one-half of what would be required from Missouri Utilities.

Is the city doing anything to help people conserve power?

No, other than trying to inform our customers on how to keep their bills down. We have not gone on an emergency conservation drive.

What are the possibilities of future industrial expansion in the city as a result of the new power supply.

We think the building of a large generating plant will attract industry because industry goes where there is a power supply to rely on. Since we are one of the 13 growth areas in Missouri, I

Wyatt woman pleads guilty

NEW MADRID — Betty Jean Reichert of Wyatt pleaded guilty Tuesday in New Madrid County Circuit Court to an amended charge of negligent manslaughter filed by Mississippi County Prosecuting Attorney Edward C. Graham. A presentence investigation has been ordered by Judge William L. Ragland.

The case had been transferred to New Madrid County on a change of venue from Mississippi County where Mrs. Reichert was charged with second degree murder in the shooting death of her husband, Homer Reichert on Oct. 6, 1975.

Reichert had been shot once with a .22 caliber pistol in the right side, just below the breast, and the bullet exited from the lower left side.

The amended charge stated the accused had handled a gun in such a manner as to show a reckless disregard for human life and safety and as a direct result thereof the gun fired causing the death of Reichert.

Sheriff posts bond, stalls ouster order

CARUTHERSVILLE — Pemiscot County Sheriff Thad Shelly submitted a bond for $45,000 to county officials late Tuesday, less than two hours before a circuit judge's order would have removed him from office.

Judge William Ragland of Caruthersville, notified of the bond while at Benton, instructed the three-member Pemiscot County Court not to appoint a new sheriff Tuesday.

The court is believed to have been ready to name former sheriff's Deputy Charles Albert Farris to replace Shelly.

Judge Ragland is expected to examine the bond today, said presiding county court Judge D. J. Meredith, "and if he finds it satisfactory, he indicated he will set aside his (ouster) order."

Ragland issued the order last Friday to declare the sheriff's office vacant, but gave Shelly until 4 p.m. Tuesday to either increase his personal bond from $5,000 to $50,000 or persuade an appellate Court to intervene.

Shelly had been ordered to increase the bond by the county court after being three months late in turning over several thousand dollars in fines to the county.

Shelly submitted the bond at 2:20 p.m., a spokesman for Circuit Cerk Robert Rushing said.

The document contained signatures of 12 of the sheriff's supporters whom the sheriff said had a combined net worth of more than $3 million.

Meanwhile, Farris, county treasurer John Turnage and former Sheriff Clyde Orton have each asked for an endorsement from the Pemiscot County Democratic Central Committee in a write-in campaign against Shelly Nov. 2.

Shelly defeated Orton, Turnage and two others in the Democratic primary Aug. 3, and is on the ballot against Republican J. C. Green in November.

Shelly became sheriff in 1971 after Orton was ousted amid charges he permitted illegal gambling and refused to cooperate with state and federal officials to enforce liquor law violations in the county.

Meanwhile, Prosecuting Attorney Mike Hazel said the sheriff will not receive his September paycheck until he turns over fine money for September to county officials.

Hazel said the action was to prevent the sheriff from using October collections to meet the September deadline.

College courses may be offered to seniors

The possibility of allowing second semester seniors at Sikeston High School to take college credit courses was discussed Tuesday night at the R-6 Board of Education meeting.

The meeting was a joint session of the board and the Sikeston Community Teachers Association Executive Committee.

Roger Sherman, director of secondary education, said representatives of the school system and Southeast Missouri State University had met to discuss the possibility of college courses being offered at the high school.

At this point, classes and who would teach them have not been decided. Sherman said only one meeting on the subject has been held with SeMo State officials.

Sherman said the program would allow seniors to pick up one or two college credit courses in the last half of their senior year. He said the students would get regular college credit that could be transferred to SeMo or other colleges.

He said the school system would be able to begin making plans within the next few weeks. Meetings on the subject will be held with students and parents, he said.

Superintendent Sam Harbin said the latest public opinion polls showed Amendment Two, which would eliminate taxes on sales taxes on food and drugs, has a good chance of passing.

Harbin said that if the Legislative does not replace the estimated $180 million in revenue that will be lost, it will cost the Sikeston school system large amounts of money and could result in the need for a property tax increase.

Harbin said state aid to the school system would be reduced $190,000 in the last half of 1977 and $402,000 in 1978.

An increase of 54 cents per $100 assessed valuation would be needed to replace the lost $190,000 and $1.04 per $100 to replace the lost $402,000, Harbin said.

Harbin said it was a fallacy to think that the elimination of the tax from food and drugs would aid the poor. He said if the legislature is to raise the $180 million, it will be through increases in the sales tax or the income tax.

The board elected Dr. Max Heeb to serve on the legislative affairs committee of the Missouri School Board Association.

Murder conviction upheld

CHARLESTON — A Mississippi County Circuit Court jury's conviction of Louie Pool, 80, of East Prairie on second-degree murder and manslaughter charges was upheld Tuesday by Judge Marshall Craig, who formally sentenced Pool to concurrent terms of 10 years on the murder charge and two years on the manslaughter charge in custody of the Department of Corrections.

Poole was found guilty Sept. 7 in the shooting deaths of Enoch Reeves of rural Charleston and Mary Mitchell of East Prairie. The murder charge stemmed from the death of Reeves, who was dating Mrs. Mitchell at the time of their deaths in the Mitchell home. Pool was a former boyfriend of Mrs. Mitchell.

Judge Craig overruled a defense motion for a new trial and also overruled Pool's oral application for probation. Appeal bond was set at $20,000 and Pool was given credit for 14 days served in the county jail following his arrest.

Murder conviction upheld

CHARLESTON — A Mississippi County Circuit Court jury's conviction of Louie Pool, 80, of East Prairie on second-degree murder and manslaughter charges was upheld Tuesday by Judge Marshall Craig, who formally sentenced Pool to concurrent terms of 10 years on the murder charge and two years on the manslaughter charge in custody of the Department of Corrections.

Poole was found guilty Sept. 7 in the shooting deaths of Enoch Reeves of rural Charleston and Mary Mitchell of East Prairie. The murder charge stemmed from the death of Reeves, who was dating Mrs. Mitchell at the time of their deaths in the Mitchell home. Pool was a former boyfriend of Mrs. Mitchell.

Judge Craig overruled a defense motion for a new trial and also overruled Pool's oral application for probation. Appeal bond was set at $20,000 and Pool was given credit for 14 days served in the county jail following his arrest.

COLUMBUS DAY

Four hundred and eighty-five years ago, we were taught in school, Columbus "discovered" America. He actually didn't, but that's what we are taught.

The Indians discovered America eons of time before Columbus or any other white man arrived here. Understandably, the Indians refuse to observe Columbus Day. By the same token, they are refusing to help us observe the 200th anniversary of the establishment of a nation in North America. Here too they are right. The Cherokees, Iriquois and other tribes had established independent nations here hundreds of years before we arrived and stole the country from them.

UNCLE SAM SAP

Evidence continues to accumulate to show that the cool, calculating and conniving Communists made absolute suckers out of the U.S. "neogitators" and international trade "experts" selling wheat to the USSR. The trouble is, the American taxpayers and consumers were the ones who suffered as a consequence of the stupidity — or subversion — of the wheeler-dealers.

The newsletter of the Christian Anti- Communism Crusade (Long Beach, California) recently noted the extreme lengths taken by the Soviet Union to beef up their civil defense preparedness. In addition to factors such as industrial dispersion, the building of underground shelters, the hardening missile and radar sites against possible nuclear attack, improvement of their radar technology (in violation of SALT I agreements, by the way), the communists are also stockpiling huge quantities of underground food supplies.

"Enormous amounts of food are being stored underground," the newsletter (September 1) reports. "Outside the city of Kharkov, for example, a huge underground silo with a capacity of 200,000 tons has been constructed. America has been contributing to this war chest through the grain sold to the Soviets."

The July, 1976, issue of "The Red Line," published by the Cardinal Mindszenty Foundation in St. Louis, cites still another example of how Uncle Sam has been "taken" in the wheat deals. According to an official Communist trade journal of the USSR, during 1974 they imported 7.1 million tons of grain. They paid 75.4 rubles per ton. But, during the same year 1974, the USSR exported an almost equal amount of grain — 7 million tons. And they sold the grain for 88.6 rubles per ton. Translated into dollars, that means that the Communists turned a cool $125 million profit.

In corn, the USSR made even bigger suckers out of the USA. The Comrades bought corn forus at 55.2 rubles per ton. They sold corn for 70.1 rubles per ton.

And all the time, we were being fed the propaganda line that we had to sell our wheat for humanitarian reasons to help poor, starving Russians because of an alleged drought.

It is way past time that those bureacurats in Washington, including those in the U.S. State Department, responsible for these and other collossal blunders be fired. Their continued employment is a luxury we can no longer afford, if we intend to survive as a free nation.

SORRY NATURAL GAS SITUATION DUE TO MANDATE OF CONGRESS

In an election year, it doesn't take many of us long to figure that many legislators are more interested in running for office than in running the country. For instance, just this past week, debate on a bill designed to stimulate natural gas production was postponed because too many in Congress were out campaigning.

In the meantime, the natural gas situation grows more precarious with each passing day. So far, there was no serious shortage of natural gas last winter, but that more a matter of luck than design. Last year, winter temperatures across the nation were milder than normal for the fourth consecutive year. The warmer temperatures, combined with the effects of the recession on industrial demand, allowed the natural gas industry to survive without any serious interruption of deliveries. The 1976-1977 season may be an entirely different matter. Industrial demand is picking up along with the business recovery. We aren't willing to place bets on a fifth year of warmer-than-normal temperatures. A very cold winter would probably not have much of an impact on gas supplies for homes since residential heating gets top priority in the delivery schedule. However, it would probably have a devastatihg impact on large industrial users. It could conceivably stop the economic recovery in its tracks.

The sorry natural gas situation has come almost entirely from the attempts of the Federal Government to intervene in the normal supply-demand relationship. The Federal Power Commission, acting on a mandate from Congress, has set a well-head price of $.52 for each thousand cubic feet of natural gas. This applies to only gas used in the interstate market. Intrastate natural gas is selling at around $2.00 per thousand cubic feet. Obviously, producers have no incentive whatever to develop new gas reserves for interstate use.

As a result of all this, total gas reserves designed for interstate use have declined precipitously in the past several years. In 1968, gas reserves for interstate purposes reached a peak of 198 trillion cubic feet. At the end of last year, it was estimated that these reserves totaled 120 trillion cubic feet, a decline of some 40 per cent in just 8 years.

The reasons behind the decline are simple enough. In previous years, most of the natural gas came from shallow wells where drilling costs were quite low. When all of the cheap gas was drawn from the field and recovery costs made the field uneconomic, it was shut down and facilities were moved to another area. Now, there is no cheap gas left. New wells must be drilled deeper and in less accessible spots. Therefore, it is not possible for producers to make a profit at the FPC-mandated price.

If there is no action on the part of the Congress, it is possible that the FPC will take some steps to raise the present $.52 price to around $.70-$.80 and perhaps as high as $1.00 per MCF. In any event, it seems to be increasingly apparent that some action must be taken to stimulate new natural gas production.

Obviously, this is not good news for the consumer. He will find his natural gas bills going higher in the future. Moreover, even if the increased prices do stimulate new exploration efforts, the supply shortage will probably not be alleviated to any great extent before 1980 at the earliest. All of this might not be easy to swallow, but it is the price that must be paid if this important energy source is to be maintained.

The Federal Government may have chosen to ignore the implications of a dwindling natural gas supply, but the industry has been well aware of the problem for many years if anybody in Washington had listened.

TO HELP THE POOR AND AGED

Missouri has some important, needed programs helping the truly poor and elderly needy.

Welfare is an example. Every welfare check includes in it a budgeted amount for food. Cut the funds available for welfare and you are cutting funds for food.

Take the Missouri program which buys drugs for the needy, totaling $15,000,000 a year. Cut the funds for that program and the truly needy will have fewer funds for drugs.

There are other entirely desirable, needed programs for the truly needy.

Take bus fares in cities—if you can't afford a car you ride the bus. Right now state funds totalling more than $9,100,000 in St. Louis and more than $3,300,000 in Kansas City, for example, reduce bus fares accordingly. Cut the available funds and bus fares will have to go up for everybody.

There are still other such worthwhile programs for the needy.

However, they may be cruelly slashed this November.

Some well-meaning church and civic leaders, some hard-eyed politicians seeking a cheap shot at votes, are fearlessly, gloriously, self-righteously championing a plan to cut all sales taxes on food and medicine "to help the poor and aged". The precise Halloween mask they are wearing is called Amendment No. 2. They want you to actually freeze into the Constitution of the State of Missouri, this tax slash.

Now keep in mind if you can cut a tax by passing an amendment you can also increase a tax the same way. All of which is to say, the orderly, sensible, constructive way to cut a tax or increase a tax is not by freezing it into the state constitution. It is by the far more sensible route of studies of the needs, balancing the sources of taxation, permitting the public and their representatives to debate the issue and finally adopting the reforms through the legislative branch subject as it is to checks and balances.

But the people asking you to vote for Amendment No. 2 ignore that fact of life.

They also ignore the funds lost for public schools. If Amendment No. 2 passes, Mexico public schools will require a 29 cent increase to the present $4.23 school levy. Either that or they must slash their program radically.

Why not kill the sales tax on food and medicine and replace the revenue from some other tax source? The people for Amendment No. 2 ask that question. And they suggest a higher tax on all cars above compact size, on all color television sets, etc. They also ignore the expert opinion of various leading members of the State legislature who state categorically the legislature will take the easiest way out and increase the sales tax on other items like utility bills, clothing, etc., thereby hurting the poor, the elderly, and everybody else.

In short, by all means consider a No-vote on Amendment No. 2. It is a cruel, irresponsible fooler bound to hurt all Missourians.

FALSE HEROISM NO AID TO CAUSE

So now we know, thanks to five ever-so-polite airplane hijackers (who happened to leave a not-so-polite bomb behind them in New York that killed one policeman), that there is a Croatian independence movement in Yugoslavia.

Just as we learned, if we didn't know it before, that there is a nationalist movement among some Puerto Ricans, thanks to the bombing of Fraunces Tavern in New York, which killed four people.

And as we became aware that there is some kind of nationalist unrest in Indonesia, thanks to terrorists who commandeered a train in the Netherlands and shot a few people.

And of course, as Plaestinian terrorists keep reminding us, that there are certain unresolved questions in the Middle East.

Who will be the next "heroes," as Croatian expatriates in this country are calling the hijackers, to bring their cause to the attention of the world?

It is ironic that the Croatians are struggling against the oppressive rule of the Serbian majority in that multi-ethnic conglomeration called Yugoslavia.

It was a Serbian student—no doubt another otherwise polite young man and another hero—who assassinated the Archduke Ferdinand in 1914 in protest against the oppressive rule of the Austro-Hungarian empire, thereby setting off the chain reaction which led to the First World War, which only set the stage for the even more catastrophic Second World War.

Fortunately, it takes more than an assassination or a bombing or a hijacking or some ancient European grievance to launch a general war these days. The toll of human lives sacrificed on the altar of nationalism by the terrorists is counted merely in the ones or twos or tens, not the scores of millions.

Croatian refugees who are exultant over the publicity the hijacking received should reflect that it was a two-days' wonder which most people have already forgotten about. In the final analysis, it has injured their cause rather than helped it, and created more disgust than sympathy among the vast body of Americans, whose generosity in giving the Croatians a base from which to continue their political agitation has been grievously abused.

Inside Labor

Powerful Labor-Management shadow cabinet set to advise next U.S. President

No observer could deduce, from the fashion in which the 15 or so portly men saunter into the Hay-Adams Hotel here every few months, that they're shadowy. Or even men of power in massive industries, banks, construction and labor. But, as a devotee of the Sherlock Holmes Baker Street Irregulars, I always get suspicious when the dog doesn't bark.

So when labor prexy George Meany sits for hours with a famed banker or the top officer of a giant global construction corporation, or when the Seafarers' leader Paul Hall "edges up" to an improvised hotel suite bar with the head of some worldwide firm, and no one publicly discusses any of this after the men depart, it's all very significant.

These men, leaders of such corporations as U.S. Steel and General Electric et al., have been meeting with labor chiefs, including AFL-CIO secretary-treasurer Lane Kirkland, the steelworkers Abe Abel and the clothing and textile president Murray Finley for over a year now. Coordinating them is Harvard professor John Dunlop, whose air-shuttling track record outruns Henry Kissinger's.

This 15-man committee met June 30. And again almost all day on Sept. 22. And they're scheduled to gather Nov. 10--just a week or so after the presidential toll has been tallied.

For the moment, they reach President Ford through his economic specialist, the in-house Bill Seidman. Gov. Carter is more difficult to contact. But it's taken for granted that the Plains camp "is kept in touch" by the professorial Mister Bang, known as Dunlop. He's now jetting around the nation attempting to put together a construction labor, construction purchaser, construction industry no-strike peace pact in the nuclear plant construction field.

It would ge a cruel, even unpatriotic, injustice to attempt to overdramatize this shadowy labor-management "committee." The ties which bind it together are gossamer. But the group's critical importance to this nation to its economic stability, to the battle against cash-corroding inflation and to national unity simply can't be exaggerated.

Its members are doing their arithmetic while virtually all others are doing politics. They realize that 1977 can be a searing year of labor-management warfare so explosive it could blow the U.S. right into uncontrollable inflation. Much like Britain's.

Just look at what's on the incoming docket -- tough negotiations between labor and industry in oil, paper, metals (copper), can, steel, coal and construction just to mention a few.

Millions of workers are involved. They'll look back over 1976, these ever younger work forces will. Indeed they'll note that the Teamsters won what will verge on a 36 to 40 per cent wage-fringe increase; the rubber workers got close to 40 per cent; the electrical equipment unions (General Electric) won some 33 per cent. Most increases are "front ended." That is, heavy in the first year.

Can all this be topped? Well, the rank-and-file will try. You can believe it. No insider will deny his or her uneasiness as the rest of the country's workers watch the automobile industry slip over the threshold of the era of the four day work week for five days pay.

And there is unrest and political turbulence inside the United Mine Workers -- which if it strikes for any long period can brown out cities or slow down whole industries. Incumbent president Arnold Miller is being challenged. So is the establishment in the United Steelworkers, as Abe Abel retires next year. And there will be a changing of the guard in the 1.4 million-member United Auto Workers.

Who then will lead these massive unions? In fact, who will lead the umbrella labor federation, the AFL-CIO, with which the big auto union soon will merge?

George Meany, labor's 82-year-old chief of chiefs, keeps toying with us newspeople. He likes what he's doing, he says. Chuckling, he gibes, that he's been doing it for 50 years so why quit. His doctor tells him he's healthy, so who is he to argue with his doctor, he adds.

But the inside talk persists he'll resign at the February 1977 Executive Council session. And thus he won't defy the institutional interdynamics of age, power and a mass movement. Further, almost half the AFL-CIO high command will be replaced for many reasons.

So it's vital that the labor-management front be non-partisanly guided. That's what the labor-management committee discusses during those shadowy sessions. Prof. Dunlop has prepared a series of position papers on jobs, construction, housing, taxes and other socio-economic problems. Soon they'll have a consensus. This they'll present to the next President.

They will talk as one concerted action "group" (as it's called in Germany). They are men of banks and steel and electrical equipment and of labor. Men eager to elect Jerry Ford or Jimmy Carter. But men eager to keep this nation from being ripped by the turbulence so acrimoniously characteristic of creaking European nations.

So they've taken an oath of silence. And that's why the dog doesn't bark.

LESSON OF THE POUND

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

The dramatic fall in value of the British pound teaches the most important lesson Americans should learn before they vote in the November election: the economic failure of the welfare state.

From England the message is coming through loud and clear: don't follow the siren sounds of the Socialist planners who claim they can redistribute the wealth and build a more just society. Don't swallow the demagoguery of the politicians who try to buy the people's votes with their own money by catering to special interest groups.

Don't follow the utopian plans of the elitists who preach that they can build the kingdom of heaven in this world right now by government decree.

For the last 30 years, Britain has had nationalized electricity, gas, water, coal, steel, railroads and long distance trucks and buses. Nobody profited by this government takeover, certainly not the taxpayer, and not even the consume of the workers.

Because of the absence of competition, prices in nationalized industries increased much faster than those in private industries. "Bringing coals to Newcastle" used to be an expression that described England's unlimited abundance of that essential national resource. Yet after the coal mine were nationalized, the inefficiency was so great that England had to import coal.

In housing, the social planners argued that tenants should be protected from greedy landlords, and that rent control would fix a "just price" for all. The result of artificially low rents is the virtual elimination of privately owned apartments or rooms to rent. Landlords sell their property whenever tenants leave because the rent does not cover the costs, and the law makes it difficult if not impossible to remove even the most objectionable tenants.

Those who cannot afford to own their own homes, or whom circumstances compel to take temporary housing, must resort to public housing, which is plagued with muggings, vandalism, noise and inconvenience.

Socialized medicine has resulted in long queues for medical care, long waiting lists to get into hospital beds and the emigration of many experienced doctors and specialists, while more and more money each year is spent on administration. The waiting list for an operation to have eye cataracts removed is two years.

About 64 pre cent of the gross national product is taken by the government. The progressive income tax rate goes up to 98 per cent, to which is added a variety of taxes on capital, including a new gift tax and a prospective wealth tax.

The average British worker pays one-third of his own wages for the welfare state, and probably up to 20 per cent of adult males are on welfare.

British socialism is a spectacular economic failure, and the proof is in the pound.

Since 1971 when the pound was allowed to float, it has suffered an effective devaluation of 44.6 per cent.

Britain has asked the International Monetary Fund for a giant loan of $3.9 billion. This is in addition to the $2 billion Britain has received from the fund within the last year, plus $5.3 billion from other international sources.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen said that the Ford administration will support any IMF action to prop up the pound. Question: Should our government commit billions of American dollars to the International Monetary Fund to save socialism in England?

Critical Cracks in Trident Subs

with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The Trident submarines, which will make up the Navy's undersea fleet of the future, have developed cracks in more than 100 critical places.

The first of these billion-dollar boats is scheduled for delivery in 1978. Altogether, four have been ordered so far from the Electirc Boat division of General Dynamics. They will cruise greater distances more silently than any submarine in the world. Each will also be able to launch 24 nuclear missiles at targets 4,000 miles away.

But on the first three subs now under construction, Navy and Electric Boat inspectors have found cracks in such senstive spots as the wall separating the engine room from the nuclear plant.

According to a confidential Navy inspection memo, "cracks were visually observed" during a routine inspection of the lead submarine, which is identified as SSNB 726. Electric Boat brought in sophisticated electronic testing devices.

"Magnetic inspection has revealed 100 cracks" in SSNB 726 alone, reports the memo. The tests were then made on the lead submarine's two sister ships.

"There are indications," states the memo, "that the SSNB 727 and 728 ... also have cracks" in an interior wall separating the reactor from the nuclear works. "The cause of this weld cracking has not been determined," the memo adds.

The Navy's Capt. A.C. Bivens, who reported the cracks, told us they weren't "an unusual thing." He explained that the special steels used for subs sometimes present special problems. The Navy and Electric Boat, he said, have worked out a solution that will still permit delivery of the first Trident by December, 1978.

SAD SPEAKER: Sources close to Speaker Carl Albert say he has been depressed since he banged the gavel adjourning Congress. It was the last time he would preside over his beloved House, the last time he would swing the great gavel, the last time he would sit in the thronelike leather chair behind the marble rostrum.

Albert spoke bitterly to intimates about the man who is expected to replace him as speaker next year. Albert said he had received a phone call from House Majority Leader Thomas "Tip" O'Neill, D.-Mass., pressuring him to retire.

Sources privy to the conversation say that O'Neill mentioned the congressional sex scandals and warned that Albert's relationship with young girls could be embarrassing. The speaker has squired young pretties occasionally to Washington parties.

He described O'Neill's call to one friend at first as "blackmail." Then Albert modified his statement and said O'Neill merely had given him "advice." O'Neill denied to us that he had brought any pressure at all on the speaker to retire. O'Neill "absolutely denied" that he had ever spoken to Albert about the girls he escorts.

No one has ever questioned Albert's integrity, his fairness, his decency. Few men have worked for their country with more dedication. He virtually lives in the ornate speaker's suites, where he still can be found usually from the dawn's early light until after dark. He is often there on weekends, too -- a small, lonely figure behind the massive desk.

FAST TALKER: President Ford has appointed an engaging, 38-year-old banker named Eugene Girard to dispense $200 million in foreign aid each year to Latin America. What wasn't mentioned in the glowing press announcement was that Girard recently was eased out of Citibank, formerly First National City Bank of New York, after more than $10 million in loan losses was discovered.

Girard once talked his way out of being killed by Mexican terrorists who had kidnapped him. They let him go for a small $12,000 ransom and his wife's jewelry. The persuasive Girard has now talked his way into the $40,000-a-year job of running the entire AID program in Latin America.

Girard's nomination by President Ford was rushed through the Senate during its dying days with no investigation whatsoever and only routine hearings. He was sworn in last week.

A bit of checking, however, would have shown a dubious financial record for a man who will be investing $200 million of the taxpayers' money in Latin America.

Until September 1, he was a vice president of Citibank, which has offices throughout Latin America. One of its most notable offices is located in Panama, where Girard worked his way up from an assistant manager.

He became the hero, then the goat, of more than $200 million in real estate loans during Panama's land boom. Eventually, Citibank's loans dropped in real value by more than $10 million, by the most conservative estimates. Girard got the blame.

A special team of auditors was sent to Panama to look into the loans approved by Girard, his staff and the parent loan committee in New York City. What they found remains something of a mystery. One Citibank source told us they found "losses." A second source stressed that Girard's judgment, but not his honesty, was questioned.

In any event, he was quietly encouraged to resign. Not long afterward, he talked his way into his key job with the Ford administration.

Of his departure from Citibank, Girard told us it was a "mutual situation." As to the losses, he acknowledged that "maybe we were a bit optimistic."

Footnote: A spokesman said the White House was aware of the Panama situation and "it was no bar to appointment." At Citibank, Senior Vice President Richard Wheeler refused to discuss the Panama losses.

SORRY NATURAL GAS SITUATION DUE TO MANDATE OF CONGRESS

In an election year, it doesn't take many of us long to figure that many legislators are more interested in running for office than in running the country. For instance, just this past week, debate on a bill designed to stimulate natural gas production was postponed because too many in Congress were out campaigning.

In the meantime, the natural gas situation grows more precarious with each passing day. So far, there was no serious shortage of natural gas last winter, but that more a matter of luck than design. Last year, winter temperatures across the nation were milder than normal for the fourth consecutive year. The warmer temperatures, combined with the effects of the recession on industrial demand, allowed the natural gas industry to survive without any serious interruption of deliveries. The 1976-1977 season may be an entirely different matter. Industrial demand is picking up along with the business recovery. We aren't willing to place bets on a fifth year of warmer-than-normal temperatures. A very cold winter would probably not have much of an impact on gas supplies for homes since residential heating gets top priority in the delivery schedule. However, it would probably have a devastatihg impact on large industrial users. It could conceivably stop the economic recovery in its tracks.

The sorry natural gas situation has come almost entirely from the attempts of the Federal Government to intervene in the normal supply-demand relationship. The Federal Power Commission, acting on a mandate from Congress, has set a well-head price of $.52 for each thousand cubic feet of natural gas. This applies to only gas used in the interstate market. Intrastate natural gas is selling at around $2.00 per thousand cubic feet. Obviously, producers have no incentive whatever to develop new gas reserves for interstate use.

As a result of all this, total gas reserves designed for interstate use have declined precipitously in the past several years. In 1968, gas reserves for interstate purposes reached a peak of 198 trillion cubic feet. At the end of last year, it was estimated that these reserves totaled 120 trillion cubic feet, a decline of some 40 per cent in just 8 years.

The reasons behind the decline are simple enough. In previous years, most of the natural gas came from shallow wells where drilling costs were quite low. When all of the cheap gas was drawn from the field and recovery costs made the field uneconomic, it was shut down and facilities were moved to another area. Now, there is no cheap gas left. New wells must be drilled deeper and in less accessible spots. Therefore, it is not possible for producers to make a profit at the FPC-mandated price.

If there is no action on the part of the Congress, it is possible that the FPC will take some steps to raise the present $.52 price to around $.70-$.80 and perhaps as high as $1.00 per MCF. In any event, it seems to be increasingly apparent that some action must be taken to stimulate new natural gas production.

Obviously, this is not good news for the consumer. He will find his natural gas bills going higher in the future. Moreover, even if the increased prices do stimulate new exploration efforts, the supply shortage will probably not be alleviated to any great extent before 1980 at the earliest. All of this might not be easy to swallow, but it is the price that must be paid if this important energy source is to be maintained.

The Federal Government may have chosen to ignore the implications of a dwindling natural gas supply, but the industry has been well aware of the problem for many years if anybody in Washington had listened.

TO HELP THE POOR AND AGED

Missouri has some important, needed programs helping the truly poor and elderly needy.

Welfare is an example. Every welfare check includes in it a budgeted amount for food. Cut the funds available for welfare and you are cutting funds for food.

Take the Missouri program which buys drugs for the needy, totaling $15,000,000 a year. Cut the funds for that program and the truly needy will have fewer funds for drugs.

There are other entirely desirable, needed programs for the truly needy.

Take bus fares in cities—if you can't afford a car you ride the bus. Right now state funds totalling more than $9,100,000 in St. Louis and more than $3,300,000 in Kansas City, for example, reduce bus fares accordingly. Cut the available funds and bus fares will have to go up for everybody.

There are still other such worthwhile programs for the needy.

However, they may be cruelly slashed this November.

Some well-meaning church and civic leaders, some hard-eyed politicians seeking a cheap shot at votes, are fearlessly, gloriously, self-righteously championing a plan to cut all sales taxes on food and medicine "to help the poor and aged". The precise Halloween mask they are wearing is called Amendment No. 2. They want you to actually freeze into the Constitution of the State of Missouri, this tax slash.

Now keep in mind if you can cut a tax by passing an amendment you can also increase a tax the same way. All of which is to say, the orderly, sensible, constructive way to cut a tax or increase a tax is not by freezing it into the state constitution. It is by the far more sensible route of studies of the needs, balancing the sources of taxation, permitting the public and their representatives to debate the issue and finally adopting the reforms through the legislative branch subject as it is to checks and balances.

But the people asking you to vote for Amendment No. 2 ignore that fact of life.

They also ignore the funds lost for public schools. If Amendment No. 2 passes, Mexico public schools will require a 29 cent increase to the present $4.23 school levy. Either that or they must slash their program radically.

Why not kill the sales tax on food and medicine and replace the revenue from some other tax source? The people for Amendment No. 2 ask that question. And they suggest a higher tax on all cars above compact size, on all color television sets, etc. They also ignore the expert opinion of various leading members of the State legislature who state categorically the legislature will take the easiest way out and increase the sales tax on other items like utility bills, clothing, etc., thereby hurting the poor, the elderly, and everybody else.

In short, by all means consider a No-vote on Amendment No. 2. It is a cruel, irresponsible fooler bound to hurt all Missourians.

FALSE HEROISM NO AID TO CAUSE

So now we know, thanks to five ever-so-polite airplane hijackers (who happened to leave a not-so-polite bomb behind them in New York that killed one policeman), that there is a Croatian independence movement in Yugoslavia.

Just as we learned, if we didn't know it before, that there is a nationalist movement among some Puerto Ricans, thanks to the bombing of Fraunces Tavern in New York, which killed four people.

And as we became aware that there is some kind of nationalist unrest in Indonesia, thanks to terrorists who commandeered a train in the Netherlands and shot a few people.

And of course, as Plaestinian terrorists keep reminding us, that there are certain unresolved questions in the Middle East.

Who will be the next "heroes," as Croatian expatriates in this country are calling the hijackers, to bring their cause to the attention of the world?

It is ironic that the Croatians are struggling against the oppressive rule of the Serbian majority in that multi-ethnic conglomeration called Yugoslavia.

It was a Serbian student—no doubt another otherwise polite young man and another hero—who assassinated the Archduke Ferdinand in 1914 in protest against the oppressive rule of the Austro-Hungarian empire, thereby setting off the chain reaction which led to the First World War, which only set the stage for the even more catastrophic Second World War.

Fortunately, it takes more than an assassination or a bombing or a hijacking or some ancient European grievance to launch a general war these days. The toll of human lives sacrificed on the altar of nationalism by the terrorists is counted merely in the ones or twos or tens, not the scores of millions.

Croatian refugees who are exultant over the publicity the hijacking received should reflect that it was a two-days' wonder which most people have already forgotten about. In the final analysis, it has injured their cause rather than helped it, and created more disgust than sympathy among the vast body of Americans, whose generosity in giving the Croatians a base from which to continue their political agitation has been grievously abused.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

LESSON OF THE POUND

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

The dramatic fall in value of the British pound teaches the most important lesson Americans should learn before they vote in the November election: the economic failure of the welfare state.

From England the message is coming through loud and clear: don't follow the siren sounds of the Socialist planners who claim they can redistribute the wealth and build a more just society. Don't swallow the demagoguery of the politicians who try to buy the people's votes with their own money by catering to special interest groups.

Don't follow the utopian plans of the elitists who preach that they can build the kingdom of heaven in this world right now by government decree.

For the last 30 years, Britain has had nationalized electricity, gas, water, coal, steel, railroads and long distance trucks and buses. Nobody profited by this government takeover, certainly not the taxpayer, and not even the consume of the workers.

Because of the absence of competition, prices in nationalized industries increased much faster than those in private industries. "Bringing coals to Newcastle" used to be an expression that described England's unlimited abundance of that essential national resource. Yet after the coal mine were nationalized, the inefficiency was so great that England had to import coal.

In housing, the social planners argued that tenants should be protected from greedy landlords, and that rent control would fix a "just price" for all. The result of artificially low rents is the virtual elimination of privately owned apartments or rooms to rent. Landlords sell their property whenever tenants leave because the rent does not cover the costs, and the law makes it difficult if not impossible to remove even the most objectionable tenants.

Those who cannot afford to own their own homes, or whom circumstances compel to take temporary housing, must resort to public housing, which is plagued with muggings, vandalism, noise and inconvenience.

Socialized medicine has resulted in long queues for medical care, long waiting lists to get into hospital beds and the emigration of many experienced doctors and specialists, while more and more money each year is spent on administration. The waiting list for an operation to have eye cataracts removed is two years.

About 64 pre cent of the gross national product is taken by the government. The progressive income tax rate goes up to 98 per cent, to which is added a variety of taxes on capital, including a new gift tax and a prospective wealth tax.

The average British worker pays one-third of his own wages for the welfare state, and probably up to 20 per cent of adult males are on welfare.

British socialism is a spectacular economic failure, and the proof is in the pound.

Since 1971 when the pound was allowed to float, it has suffered an effective devaluation of 44.6 per cent.

Britain has asked the International Monetary Fund for a giant loan of $3.9 billion. This is in addition to the $2 billion Britain has received from the fund within the last year, plus $5.3 billion from other international sources.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen said that the Ford administration will support any IMF action to prop up the pound. Question: Should our government commit billions of American dollars to the International Monetary Fund to save socialism in England?

Powerful Labor-Management shadow cabinet set to advise next U.S. President

No observer could deduce, from the fashion in which the 15 or so portly men saunter into the Hay-Adams Hotel here every few months, that they're shadowy. Or even men of power in massive industries, banks, construction and labor. But, as a devotee of the Sherlock Holmes Baker Street Irregulars, I always get suspicious when the dog doesn't bark.

So when labor prexy George Meany sits for hours with a famed banker or the top officer of a giant global construction corporation, or when the Seafarers' leader Paul Hall "edges up" to an improvised hotel suite bar with the head of some worldwide firm, and no one publicly discusses any of this after the men depart, it's all very significant.

These men, leaders of such corporations as U.S. Steel and General Electric et al., have been meeting with labor chiefs, including AFL-CIO secretary-treasurer Lane Kirkland, the steelworkers Abe Abel and the clothing and textile president Murray Finley for over a year now. Coordinating them is Harvard professor John Dunlop, whose air-shuttling track record outruns Henry Kissinger's.

This 15-man committee met June 30. And again almost all day on Sept. 22. And they're scheduled to gather Nov. 10–just a week or so after the presidential toll has been tallied.

For the moment, they reach President Ford through his economic specialist, the in-house Bill Seidman. Gov. Carter is more difficult to contact. But it's taken for granted that the Plains camp "is kept in touch" by the professorial Mister Bang, known as Dunlop. He's now jetting around the nation attempting to put together a construction labor, construction purchaser, construction industry no-strike peace pact in the nuclear plant construction field.

It would ge a cruel, even unpatriotic, injustice to attempt to overdramatize this shadowy labor-management "committee." The ties which bind it together are gossamer. But the group's critical importance to this nation to its economic stability, to the battle against cash-corroding inflation and to national unity simply can't be exaggerated.

Its members are doing their arithmetic while virtually all others are doing politics. They realize that 1977 can be a searing year of labor-management warfare so explosive it could blow the U.S. right into uncontrollable inflation. Much like Britain's.

Just look at what's on the incoming docket -- tough negotiations between labor and industry in oil, paper, metals (copper), can, steel, coal and construction just to mention a few.

Millions of workers are involved. They'll look back over 1976, these ever younger work forces will. Indeed they'll note that the Teamsters won what will verge on a 36 to 40 per cent wage-fringe increase; the rubber workers got close to 40 per cent; the electrical equipment unions (General Electric) won some 33 per cent. Most increases are "front ended." That is, heavy in the first year.

Can all this be topped? Well, the rank-and-file will try. You can believe it. No insider will deny his or her uneasiness as the rest of the country's workers watch the automobile industry slip over the threshold of the era of the four day work week for five days pay.

And there is unrest and political turbulence inside the United Mine Workers -- which if it strikes for any long period can brown out cities or slow down whole industries. Incumbent president Arnold Miller is being challenged. So is the establishment in the United Steelworkers, as Abe Abel retires next year. And there will be a changing of the guard in the 1.4 million-member United Auto Workers.

Who then will lead these massive unions? In fact, who will lead the umbrella labor federation, the AFL-CIO, with which the big auto union soon will merge?

George Meany, labor's 82-year-old chief of chiefs, keeps toying with us newspeople. He likes what he's doing, he says. Chuckling, he gibes, that he's been doing it for 50 years so why quit. His doctor tells him he's healthy, so who is he to argue with his doctor, he adds.

But the inside talk persists he'll resign at the February 1977 Executive Council session. And thus he won't defy the institutional interdynamics of age, power and a mass movement. Further, almost half the AFL-CIO high command will be replaced for many reasons.

So it's vital that the labor-management front be nonpartisanly guided. That's what the labor-management committee discusses during those shadowy sessions. Prof. Dunlop has prepared a series of position papers on jobs, construction, housing, taxes and other socio-economic problems. Soon they'll have a consensus. This they'll present to the next President.

They will talk as one concerted action "group" (as it's called in Germany). They are men of banks and steel and electrical equipment and of labor. Men eager to elect Jerry Ford or Jimmy Carter. But men eager to keep this nation from being ripped by the turbulence so acrimoniously characteristic of creaking European nations.

So they've taken an oath of silence. And that's why the dog doesn't bark.

Critical Cracks in Trident Subs

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The Trident submarines, which will make up the Navy's undersea fleet of the future, have developed cracks in more than 100 critical places.

The first of these billion-dollar boats is scheduled for delivery in 1978. Altogether, four have been ordered so far from the Electirc Boat division of General Dynamics. They will cruise greater distances more silently than any submarine in the world. Each will also be able to launch 24 nuclear missiles at targets 4,000 miles away.

But on the first three subs now under construction, Navy and Electric Boat inspectors have found cracks in such senstive spots as the wall separating the engine room from the nuclear plant.

According to a confidential Navy inspection memo, "cracks were visually observed" during a routine inspection of the lead submarine, which is identified as SSNB 726. Electric Boat brought in sophisticated electronic testing devices.

"Magnetic inspection has revealed 100 cracks" in SSNB 726 alone, reports the memo. The tests were then made on the lead submarine's two sister ships.

"There are indications," states the memo, "that the SSNB 727 and 728 ... also have cracks" in an interior wall separating the reactor from the nuclear works. "The cause of this weld cracking has not been determined," the memo adds.

The Navy's Capt. A.C. Bivens, who reported the cracks, told us they weren't "an unusual thing." He explained that the special steels used for subs sometimes present special problems. The Navy and Electric Boat, he said, have worked out a solution that will still permit delivery of the first Trident by December, 1978.

SAD SPEAKER: Sources close to Speaker Carl Albert say he has been depressed since he banged the gavel adjourning Congress. It was the last time he would preside over his beloved House, the last time he would swing the great gavel, the last time he would sit in the thronelike leather chair behind the marble rostrum.

Albert spoke bitterly to intimates about the man who is expected to replace him as speaker next year. Albert said he had received a phone call from House Majority Leader Thomas "Tip" O'Neill, D.-Mass., pressuring him to retire.

Sources privy to the conversation say that O'Neill mentioned the congressional sex scandals and warned that Albert's relationship with young girls could be embarrassing. The speaker has squired young pretties occasionally to Washington parties.

He described O'Neill's call to one friend at first as "blackmail." Then Albert modified his statement and said O'Neill merely had given him "advice." O'Neill denied to us that he had brought any pressure at all on the speaker to retire. O'Neill "absolutely denied" that he had ever spoken to Albert about the girls he escorts.

No one has ever questioned Albert's integrity, his fairness, his decency. Few men have worked for their country with more dedication. He virtually lives in the ornate speaker's suites, where he still can be found usually from the dawn's early light until after dark. He is often there on weekends, too -- a small, lonely figure behind the massive desk.

FAST TALKER: President Ford has appointed an engaging, 38-year-old banker named Eugene Girard to dispense $200 million in foreign aid each year to Latin America. What wasn't mentioned in the glowing press announcement was that Girard recently was eased out of Citibank, formerly First National City Bank of New York, after more than $10 million in loan losses was discovered.

Girard once talked his way out of being killed by Mexican terrorists who had kidnapped him. They let him go for a small $12,000 ransom and his wife's jewelry. The persuasive Girard has now talked his way into the $40,000-a-year job of running the entire AID program in Latin America.

Girard's nomination by President Ford was rushed through the Senate during its dying days with no investigation whatsoever and only routine hearings. He was sworn in last week.

A bit of checking, however, would have shown a dubious financial record for a man who will be investing $200 million of the taxpayers' money in Latin America.

Until September 1, he was a vice president of Citibank, which has offices throughout Latin America. One of its most notable offices is located in Panama, where Girard worked his way up from an assistant manager.

He became the hero, then the goat, of more than $200 million in real estate loans during Panama's land boom. Eventually, Citibank's loans dropped in real value by more than $10 million, by the most conservative estimates. Girard got the blame.

A special team of auditors was sent to Panama to look into the loans approved by Girard, his staff and the parent loan committee in New York City. What they found remains something of a mystery. One Citibank source told us they found "losses." A second source stressed that Girard's judgment, but not his honesty, was questioned.

In any event, he was quietly encouraged to resign. Not long afterward, he talked his way into his key job with the Ford administration.

Of his departure from Citibank, Girard told us it was a "mutual situation." As to the losses, he acknowledged that "maybe we were a bit optimistic."

Footnote: A spokesman said the White House was aware of the Panama situation and "it was no bar to appointment." At Citibank, Senior Vice President Richard Wheeler refused to discuss the Panama losses.

Coffee prices slide up again

NEW YORK (AP) — Coffee prices are going up again, but consumers may not feel the full impact of the increases right away.

For the second time in four months, General Foods Corp. announced on Tuesday a 5.5 to 6.4 per cent wholesale price increase on five of its most popular brands.

Earlier this month, Nestle Co. boosted wholesale prices on instant coffee by 7 to 14 per cent. Sharp rises in green coffee prices is the reason cited for the hikes.

General Foods said it raised prices on Maxwell House and Yuban ground coffee and on Sanka and Brim ground decaffeinated coffee by 15 cents a pound. The price of a can of Max-Pax ground coffee filter rings will rise 15 cents a can.

A spokesman for the company said the consumer should feel the increase in about a month.

Home canners not cautious enough

HYATTSVILLE, Md., — One out of three American families canned fruit and vegetables at home in 1975, many of them using questionable procedures, according to a national survey conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

About one out of two households canned less than 50 quarts, while one out of four canned more than 100, and one out of ten, more than 200 quarts. Tomatoes were the most popular, with three out of four households canning this food, and one out of two households canning other vegetables, pickles, and fruit.

Twice as many households canned fruit and vegetables in the West as in the Northeast, and two to three times as many in rural areas as in large cities. Four out of five who canned in 1975 also canned in 1974, and only one out of 20 do not plan to can this year. Six out of ten home canners said they got information on canning from friends or relatives.

The survey revealed that many people were not following procedures recommended by food scientists of USDA's Agricultural Reseaarch Service. For example, although most households used jars designed for home canning, one out of three also used peanut butter, coffee, and other kinds of jars, contrary to USDA recommendations. Most canners used two-piece lids with new flat metal disks; one in ten, however, were reusing some flat disks, a practice also contrary to USDA recommendations.

The open-kettle method of canning, recommended only for jellies and as an initial step in preparing jams before water-bath processing, was used by nearly half of those canning fruit and pickles, one third of those canning tomatoes, and one out of seven canning vegetables. Also, many home canners were filling jars too tightly, a practice that can result in underprocessed foods.

In addition, contrary to SUSDA recommendatins, one out of five households were serving home-canned vegetables with no further heating.

Most home canners seemed to be aware of signs indicating spoilage in canned foods--bulging lids, leaks, spurting liquid when a container is opened, off-odor, and mold. Although deadly botulinum toxin may be present in improperly canned foods without any visible signs of spoilage, two out of five home canners thought there would always be some obvious signs if the food were spoiled.

About a fourth of those surveyed reported they had spoilage in home canned fruit and vegetables. While the survey did not reveal the actual causes, three out of four households thought it was due to lids that failed to seal properly.

ARS officials stress the need for home canners to follow reliable instructions to reduce the risk of spoilage and avoid illness.

New Madrid DAR chapter host to district meeting

NEW MADRID — The Lucy Jefferson Lewis Chapter, DAR, was hostess to the annual meeting of the Southeast District of the Missouri State Society, Daughters of American Revolution recently at the United Methodist Church in New Madrid. The Southeast District is comprised of 17 chapters from Fredericktown, St. Louis, University City, Potosi, Kennett, Jackson, Florissant, Affton, Sikeston, DeSoto, Cape Girardeau, Farmington, Pacific, Webster Groves and New Madrid.

Preceding the meeting, registration and coffee hour was held at 9:00 a.m. Mrs. James Fletcher and Mrs. Jesse Marr were in charge of registration and Mrs. Ralph Anderson was chairman of hospitality. She was assisted by Mrs. Monroe Robbins. Present were 93 members and a guest.

The presentation of colors was conducted by Mrs. Herbert Carpenter, state custodian of flags. The colors were presented by Mrs. Howard Crisler and Mrs. Harry Bock. The meeting was called to order by Shirley Ann Pease, district director. Mrs. Michael Zuk, state chaplain, gave the invocation, and then the pledge of allegiance was led by Mrs. Charles Barnett, honorary state regent and past vice president general. This was followed by the American Creed led by Mrs. David Ferrenbach, state vice regent. The entire group joined in singing the national anthem, led by Mrs. Maurice Shier, state organizing secretary and accompanied by Mrs. Jesse Wilkins.

Sandra Johnson, state regent, was presented by Miss Pease, as were all state officers, state chairmen and honored guests. Secretary for the meeting was Mrs. Harry Bock and timer was Mrs. Howard Crisler. Mrs. Frederick A. Groves, honorary president general, was introduced, after which Mrs. Charles C. Barnett Jr., honorary state regent, past vice president general and currently serving as national vice chairman of American heritage committee in charge of literature and drama, spoke briefly. Mrs. Herbert H. White, honorary state regent and associate standing for the election of national registrar general asked for support of Coldwater Cemetery.

Regents of all the chapters of Southeast District then presented their annual reports. Following this was a report from state officers and state chairmen.

The membership then divided into workshops for regents, vice regents, secretaries, registrata and treasurers.

At 12:30 p.m. the Daughters gathered in the Education Building of the Methodist Church for a luncheon prepared by the Missionary Society. Mrs. John Edwards was general chairman and Mrs. R.D. James was in charge of decorations, assisted by Mrs. Joseph McCrate.

Mrs. Whitson Henry, regent of the Lucy Jefferson Lewis Chapter, presided and Mrs. Scott Ruby, chaplain asked the blessing. Following the luncheon, Dorothy Conway, national chairman of Junior American Citizens gave her report. Mrs. Henry introduced Mrs. David Ferrenbach, state vice regent, who introduced Mrs. Frederick Groves, honorary president general. She gave the principal address.

Sandra Johnson, state regent briefly addressed the Daughters and presented Mrs. Herbert White, honorary state regent standing for the election of national registrar general and Southeast District went on record as the first district to endorse Mrs. White's candidacy. St. Louis chapters extended an invitation for the 38th annual meeting.

Guests and members were entertained with a lecture-slide presentation by MSSDAR Junior Members, Nancy Short, Louise Taraba and Rolfe Teague entitled "Milestones in Missouri's Past." This presentation commemorated the historic highways El Camino Real, Boone's Lick Road, and Santa Fe Trail as far as the town of Santa Fe to the northeast corner of 122nd St. and State Line in Kansas City. The slides showed pictures of historic markers, houses, churches, and monuments along the highways.

This was followed by benediction and adjournment.

Bread firm warned about health claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The folks who bake "Fresh Horizons" bread say their high-fiber product is a food — not a drug. But the government says they should stop claiming that their loaves help prevent ailments ranging from cancer to varicose veins.

The Food and Drug Administration said Tuesday it has issued a warning to ITT Continental Baking Co. telling the firm it has gone too far in promoting the medical value of its "Fresh Horizons" brand bread.

Unless the company immediately ceases making medical claims about "Fresh Horizons," the FDA said, the bread will be considered an unapproved new drug. Such a drug cannot be marketed legally.

In a regulatory letter to ITT Continental's president, M.C. Woodward Jr., the FDA charged that the bread has been promoted in advertising as a medical aid in preventing cancer of the colon, diverticulitis, heart disease, diabetes, obesity and varicose veins.

The federal regulatory agency said that unless such labeling claims and promotions aimed at physicians are halted, the government will seize the bread and seek a court injunction against the manufacturer to halt the practice.

A spokesman for the baking company in Rye, N.Y., confirmed that advertising of "Fresh Horizons" bread has been directed to physicians. But he said a brochure that praises the bread has not been sent to physicians as originally planned.

The spokesman said ITT Continental will ask FDA officials to clarify what claims the company can make for its bread. The product has been heavily promoted.

"We certainly shall comply with whatever steps are required," the company spokesman said. "But we don't want to move in the dark."

Bookstore shatters image of traditional sex roles

"We tried to choose books that offered children more options," said Bill Anderson, a day-care worker who volunteers at the nonprofit store.

"They show that girls don't have to be just mothers, or some man's possession," he said in an interview. "And there are books that show little boys crying or playing with dolls, all in a very positive light."

Judy Brunk, head of the board of directors that runs the store, said, "We also carry books dealing with problems children go through, such as death or living with a single parent.

"There was a need for an alternative bookstore in Des Moines to provide books people couldn't get in other stores, especially children's literature."

In selecting books, staffers look for those that don't stereotype women and for books written by women about their experiences, said Joyce Drury, coordinator of elderly services for Iowa Children and Family Services.

The store carries a wide selection of fiction and poetry. It also offers medical and sociological literature, with books on natural childbirth, abortion and battered wives.

But children's books are the fastest-selling, said Ms. Drury.

So far, customers have reacted favorably to the store, she said. "A lot come in just to visit, and to talk about the women's movement."

None of the nearly 50 men and women involved in the bookstore have been in the business before, said Ms. Brunk. Each of them contributed $50 or 50 hours of work to help get the store opened three weeks ago. Day-to-day affairs are handled by a 12-person policy-making board.

Income will either go back into the store or be donated to feminist organizations, Ms. Drury said.

Green beans ally with apples

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

There's a delicious sweet-and-sour dish made with green beans and green apples. Favored by European cooks, in our opinion it should be better known on American tables.

We first tasted it about a dozen years ago at a supper given by an English friend. She told us it was her Dutch mother's recipe. Recently another friend who learned to cook from her Viennese mother gave us a similar recipe; hers adds onion to the bean and apple combination. After trying this version, we think it's as interesting as the Dutch recipe and are happy to pass it along.

APPLE SNAP BEANS

- 1 pound snap beans, tipped and cut into 1-inch lengths
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 medium onion, chopped medium-fine
- 2 medium green apples, pared and coarsely chopped
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 tablespoon cider vinegar
- 1 and 1-3rd cups clear fat-free chicken broth
- Salt to taste

Boil beans, covered, in a small amount of salted water until just tender-crisp — 7 to 10 minutes; drain. In a 10-inch skillet melt the butter; add onion and apple and cook gently, stirring often, until onion is softened and apple is cooked through — about 10 minutes. (The apple will probably be "mushy.") Stir in the flour; add the sugar and vinegar; gradually stir in the chicken broth; stir constantly over gentle heat until thickened and bubbling. Stir in beans and reheat, adding salt. Makes 6 servings.

Ann Landers

Overdue pregnancy causes couple joy, embarrasment

Dear Ann Landers: A few years after Charles and I were married we tried to have a family. After a long stretch of disappointments we went to our doctors to be checked. It turned out I was OK but Charles had a low sperm count, in fact so low his doctor said he couldn't possibly get me pregnant.

We immediately put our names in at three adoption agencies. After two years of waiting I became discouraged and talked Charles into letting me try artificial insemination. (The sperm I received was from an anonymous donor.) I became pregnant almost immediately.

We don't want to tell anyone about the artificial insemination but what choice do we have? Years ago we confided to our families (and some friends) that Charlie was sterile. (They kept asking us why we were childless.)

My husband is so thrilled about the baby he couldn't care less what people think. But I DO care. I don't want anyone to think I had a lover on the side. What should I say? -- Red-Faced In Pittsfield

Dear Pitt: Nothing. You've said too much already. The condition of Charles's sperm was nobody's business. If anyone reminds you that your husband was supposed to be sterile just say, "Miracles DO happen. It's just too wonderful for words." Then clam up.

Dear Ann Landers: You frequently deal with human problems that cause misery -- drug abuse, alcoholism and infidelity. There's another problem in our town that is equally destructive. It is "gossip-ism."

Six months ago I went through a scandalous divorce. It was the result of my husband's numerous escapades with a long list of women. All sorts of innocent people were hurt and it was a mess. (Our divorce caused two others.)

As soon as the story came out in the papers I was besieged by "well-wishers" who couldn't wait to supply me with "unpublished" facts and figures, names and places -- all the details.

Why can't people keep their mouths shut? Heaven knows I already had enough information, I didn't need more. I'm still getting phone calls and drop-in visitors bearing tales. How can I turn them off? -- Heartbreak In Tiffin

Dear Heart: When people insist on telling you more than you care to know, you CAN turn them off with one brief sentence. Sample: "Thanks for your concern, but I don't want to hear any more on that subject." Embark immediately on another topic. Even the dimmest clod will get the message

Dear Ann Landers: I want to say "Thank you" to the 18-year-old who used to be ashamed to kiss her parents in front of her friends. She said it made her feel like a baby. When her father died she changed her mind.

I used to feel the same way, but after reading her letter I realized how lucky I am to have two parents to kiss -- and how great it is that they are so affectionate.

I'll bet that gal helped many other teenagers who had the same hangup. Sign me -- Grateful To A Stranger

Dear Grateful: Thanks for letting her (and millions of others) know. That letter also reminded ME how fortunate I was to have grown up in a warm and loving family.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious--lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers's booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and along, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Coffee prices slide up again

NEW YORK (AP) — Coffee prices are going up again, but consumers may not feel the full impact of the increases right away.

For the second time in four months, General Foods Corp. announced on Tuesday a 5.5 to 6.4 per cent wholesale price increase on five of its most popular brands.

Earlier this month, Nestle Co. boosted wholesale prices on instant coffee by 7 to 14 per cent. Sharp rises in green coffee prices is the reason cited for the hikes.

General Foods said it raised prices on Maxwell House and Yuban ground coffee and on Sanka and Brim ground decaffeinated coffee by 15 cents a pound. The price of a can of Max-Pax ground coffee filter rings will rise 15 cents a can.

A spokesman for the company said the consumer should feel the increase in about a month.

Missionaries to be speakers

The women of the Charleston Baptist Association will have Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Poor, missionaries on furlough from Uruguay sponsored by the Southern Baptist Convention, at 7:30 p.m. Thursday night at the Fellowship Baptist Church on Missouri Avenue.

The meeting is for the entire family. The couple will relate their missionary experiences and present a slide show.

Car wash

The Junior Women's Club of Sikeston is sponsoring a car wash from 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday at the Jarvis Motor Co. on Highway 61 North. Proceeds from the event will be donated to the pediatrics ward at Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

Home canners not cautious enough

HYATTSVILLE, Md., — One out of three American families canned fruit and vegetables at home in 1975, many of them using questionable procedures, according to a national survey conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

About one out of two households canned less than 50 quarts, while one out of four canned more than 100, and one out of ten, more than 200 quarts. Tomatoes were the most popular, with three out of four households canning this food, and one out of two households canning other vegetables, pickles, and fruit.

Twice as many households canned fruit and vegetables in the West as in the Northeast, and two to three times as many in rural areas as in large cities. Four out of five who canned in 1975 also canned in 1974, and only one out of 20 do not plan to can this year. Six out of ten home canners said they got information on canning from friends or relatives.

The survey revealed that many people were not following procedures recommended by food scientists of USDA's Agricultural Reseaarch Service. For example, although most households used jars designed for home canning, one out of three also used peanut butter, coffee, and other kinds of jars, contrary to USDA recommendations. Most canners used two-piece lids with new flat metal disks; one in ten, however, were reusing some flat disks, a practice also contrary to USDA recommendations.

The open-kettle method of canning, recommended only for jellies and as an initial step in preparing jams before water-bath processing, was used by nearly half of those canning fruit and pickles, one third of those canning tomatoes, and one out of seven canning vegetables. Also, many home canners were filling jars too tightly, a practice that can result in underprocessed foods.

In addition, contrary to SUSDA recommendatins, one out of five households were serving home-canned vegetables with no further heating.

Most home canners seemed to be aware of signs indicating spoilage in canned foods--bulging lids, leaks, spurting liquid when a container is opened, off-odor, and mold. Although deadly botulinum toxin may be present in improperly canned foods without any visible signs of spoilage, two out of five home canners thought there would always be some obvious signs if the food were spoiled.

About a fourth of those surveyed reported they had spoilage in home canned fruit and vegetables. While the survey did not reveal the actual causes, three out of four households thought it was due to lids that failed to seal properly.

ARS officials stress the need for home canners to follow reliable instructions to reduce the risk of spoilage and avoid illness.

New Madrid DAR chapter host to district meeting

NEW MADRID — The Lucy Jefferson Lewis Chapter, DAR, was hostess to the annual meeting of the Southeast District of the Missouri State Society, Daughters of American Revolution recently at the United Methodist Church in New Madrid. The Southeast District is comprised of 17 chapters from Fredericktown, St. Louis, University City, Potosi, Kennett, Jackson, Florissant, Affton, Sikeston, DeSoto, Cape Girardeau, Farmington, Pacific, Webster Groves and New Madrid.

Preceding the meeting, registration and coffee hour was held at 9:00 a.m. Mrs. James Fletcher and Mrs. Jesse Marr were in charge of registration and Mrs. Ralph Anderson was chairman of hospitality. She was assisted by Mrs. Monroe Robbins. Present were 93 members and a guest.

The presentation of colors was conducted by Mrs. Herbert Carpenter, state custodian of flags. The colors were presented by Mrs. Howard Crisler and Mrs. Harry Bock. The meeting was called to order by Shirley Ann Pease, district director. Mrs. Michael Zuk, state chaplain, gave the invocation, and then the pledge of allegiance was led by Mrs. Charles Barnett, honorary state regent and past vice president general. This was followed by the American Creed led by Mrs. David Ferrenbach, state vice regent. The entire group joined in singing the national anthem, led by Mrs. Maurice Shier, state organizing secretary and accompanied by Mrs. Jesse Wilkins.

Sandra Johnson, state regent, was presented by Miss Pease, as were all state officers, state chairmen and honored guests. Secretary for the meeting was Mrs. Harry Bock and timer was Mrs. Howard Crisler. Mrs. Frederick A. Groves, honorary president general, was introduced, after which Mrs. Charles C. Barnett Jr., honorary state regent, past vice president general and currently serving as national vice chairman of American heritage committee in charge of literature and drama, spoke briefly. Mrs. Herbert H. White, honorary state regent and associate standing for the election of national registrar general asked for support of Coldwater Cemetery.

Regents of all the chapters of Southeast District then presented their annual reports. Following this was a report from state officers and state chairmen.

The membership then divided into workshops for regents, vice regents, secretaries, registrata and treasurers.

At 12:30 p.m. the Daughters gathered in the Education Building of the Methodist Church for a luncheon prepared by the Missionary Society. Mrs. John Edwards was general chairman and Mrs. R.D. James was in charge of decorations, assisted by Mrs. Joseph McCrate.

Mrs. Whitson Henry, regent of the Lucy Jefferson Lewis Chapter, presided and Mrs. Scott Ruby, chaplain asked the blessing. Following the luncheon, Dorothy Conway, national chairman of Junior American Citizens gave her report. Mrs. Henry introduced Mrs. David Ferrenbach, state vice regent, who introduced Mrs. Frederick Groves, honorary president general. She gave the principal address.

Sandra Johnson, state regent briefly addressed the Daughters and presented Mrs. Herbert White, honorary state regent standing for the election of national registrar general and Southeast District went on record as the first district to endorse Mrs. White's candidacy. St. Louis chapters extended an invitation for the 38th annual meeting.

Guests and members were entertained with a lecture-slide presentation by MSSDAR Junior Members, Nancy Short, Louise Taraba and Rolfe Teague entitled "Milestones in Missouri's Past." This presentation commemorated the historic highways El Camino Real, Boone's Lick Road, and Santa Fe Trail as far as the town of Santa Fe to the northeast corner of 122nd St. and State Line in Kansas City. The slides showed pictures of historic markers, houses, churches, and monuments along the highways.

This was followed by benediction and adjournment.

Bread firm warned about health claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The folks who bake "Fresh Horizons" bread say their high-fiber product is a food — not a drug. But the government says they should stop claiming that their loaves help prevent ailments ranging from cancer to varicose veins.

The Food and Drug Administration said Tuesday it has issued a warning to ITT Continental Baking Co. telling the firm it has gone too far in promoting the medical value of its "Fresh Horizons" brand bread.

Unless the company immediately ceases making medical claims about "Fresh Horizons," the FDA said, the bread will be considered an unapproved new drug. Such a drug cannot be marketed legally.

In a regulatory letter to ITT Continental's president, M.C. Woodward Jr., the FDA charged that the bread has been promoted in advertising as a medical aid in preventing cancer of the colon, diverticulitis, heart disease, diabetes, obesity and varicose veins.

The federal regulatory agency said that unless such labeling claims and promotions aimed at physicians are halted, the government will seize the bread and seek a court injunction against the manufacturer to halt the practice.

A spokesman for the baking company in Rye, N.Y., confirmed that advertising of "Fresh Horizons" bread has been directed to physicians. But he said a brochure that praises the bread has not been sent to physicians as originally planned.

The spokesman said ITT Continental will ask FDA officials to clarify what claims the company can make for its bread. The product has been heavily promoted.

"We certainly shall comply with whatever steps are required," the company spokesman said. "But we don't want to move in the dark."

Bookstore shatters image of traditional sex roles

"We tried to choose books that offered children more options," said Bill Anderson, a day-care worker who volunteers at the nonprofit store.

"They show that girls don't have to be just mothers, or some man's possession," he said in an interview. "And there are books that show little boys crying or playing with dolls, all in a very positive light."

Judy Brunk, head of the board of directors that runs the store, said, "We also carry books dealing with problems children go through, such as death or living with a single parent.

"There was a need for an alternative bookstore in Des Moines to provide books people couldn't get in other stores, especially children's literature."

In selecting books, staffers look for those that don't stereotype women and for books written by women about their experiences, said Joyce Drury, coordinator of elderly services for Iowa Children and Family Services.

The store carries a wide selection of fiction and poetry. It also offers medical and sociological literature, with books on natural childbirth, abortion and battered wives.

But children's books are the fastest-selling, said Ms. Drury.

So far, customers have reacted favorably to the store, she said. "A lot come in just to visit, and to talk about the women's movement."

None of the nearly 50 men and women involved in the bookstore have been in the business before, said Ms. Brunk. Each of them contributed $50 or 50 hours of work to help get the store opened three weeks ago. Day-to-day affairs are handled by a 12-person policy-making board.

Income will either go back into the store or be donated to feminist organizations, Ms. Drury said.

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

There's a delicious sweet-and-sour dish made with green beans and green apples. Favored by European cooks, in our opinion it should be better known on American tables.

We first tasted it about a dozen years ago at a supper given by an English friend. She told us it was her Dutch mother's recipe. Recently another friend who learned to cook from her Viennese mother gave us a similar recipe; hers adds onion to the bean and apple combination. After trying this version, we think it's as interesting as the Dutch recipe and are happy to pass it along.

APPLE SNAP BEANS

- 1 pound snap beans, tipped and cut into 1-inch lengths
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 medium onion, chopped medium-fine
- 2 medium green apples, pared and coarsely chopped
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 tablespoon cider vinegar
- 1 and 1-3rd cups clear fat-free chicken broth
- Salt to taste

Boil beans, covered, in a small amount of salted water until just tender-crisp — 7 to 10 minutes; drain. In a 10-inch skillet melt the butter; add onion and apple and cook gently, stirring often, until onion is softened and apple is cooked through — about 10 minutes. (The apple will probably be "mushy.") Stir in the flour; add the sugar and vinegar; gradually stir in the chicken broth; stir constantly over gentle heat until thickened and bubbling. Stir in beans and reheat, adding salt. Makes 6 servings.

Husband, Wife Team Serving As Ministers

The Revs. Joe and Ellen Culpepper — who answer comfortably to their first names — are team ministers at Indianapolis Arlington Heights Christian Church. Each is receiving complete theological training and serves the church in a complete capacity.

"In some ways, it keeps the church honest," Joe said. "In the past, when churches have hired a minister, they expect the wife to do a lot of work without paying her. It's very unfair that way."

Ellen agreed. "No longer is being a minister's wife a career," she said. "Churches now expect the wife to have a full-time career, and this way they are paying her for it."

A senior student at Christian Theological Seminary, where Joe received his degree in June, Ellen presides with Joe at the communion table and the two take turns delivering the sermon.

"The most meaningful thing to us and our congregation is that we both preside at the communion table every Sunday," Joe said.

"It's kind of fascinating, but our people have a family feeling about communion," Ellen said. "Seeing us up there as husband and wife gives them a strong feeling of being together before God."

The Culpeppers' church had women elders before the couple arrived. And the ministerial team was readily accepted into the church community. But still, there are problems.

The bright future of Missouri, based upon planned growth and a strong economy, is being threatened by a question that will appear on the November 2 election ballot. Because your pocketbook, your job and your entire lifestyle could be affected, it is important that you know all the facts.

This question, known as Proposition 1, seeks to change the method, followed in some form in 31 other states, that has proven to be the most efficient and least costly way to ensure that our citizens have available an adequate supply of electrical energy.

Electric companies obtain money to build new plants by borrowing money and by selling securities to investors. Proposition 1 would prohibit electric companies from including in their rates during the construction period the interest on funds borrowed to build new generating plants. People who loan money to build a new power plant expect to receive this interest currently; otherwise they will not put up the money required to build the plant. This is true of all businesses.

1. Proposition 1 could delay construction of power plants in Missouri, and these delays would add millions of dollars to the cost of the plants. These increased costs will result in higher electric bills.

2. The demand for electricity is expected to increase by at least 25 percent in our state over the next five years. Proposition 1 would make it extremely difficult for electric companies to finance the new construction necessary to supply the increased demand. Without the needed power, our industries could not expand, and new businesses would not move in. This would mean higher unemployment, a shrinking tax base and a lower standard of living. And, of course, the personal electrical needs of Missourians would not be met.

3. Many of the same people who oppose development of nuclear power in Missouri are using this issue as an attempt to halt construction of a nuclear plant being built in Callaway County. The fact is that passage of Proposition 1 could delay and possibly stop not only the Callaway plant, but other power plant construction in the state. A delay at Callaway alone would increase construction costs by over $8 million a month, or $96 million a year.

The more you know about Proposition 1, the less you'll like it.

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean futures were up the allowable daily limit of 20 cents a bushel in early dealings on the Chicago Board of Trade today and grain futures were sharply higher.

A small decrease in the Agriculture Department's October 1 soybean and corn crop production figures for this year was the demand factor.

Husband, Wife Team Serving As Ministers

The Revs. Joe and Ellen Culpepper — who answer comfortably to their first names — are team ministers at Indianapolis Arlington Heights Christian Church. Each is receiving complete theological training and serves the church in a complete capacity.

"In some ways, it keeps the church honest," Joe said. "In the past, when churches have hired a minister, they expect the wife to do a lot of work without paying her. It's very unfair that way."

Ellen agreed. "No longer is being a minister's wife a career," she said. "Churches now expect the wife to have a full-time career, and this way they are paying her for it."

A senior student at Christian Theological Seminary, where Joe received his degree in June, Ellen presides with Joe at the communion table and the two take turns delivering the sermon.

"The most meaningful thing to us and our congregation is that we both preside at the communion table every Sunday," Joe said.

"It's kind of fascinating, but our people have a family feeling about communion," Ellen said. "Seeing us up there as husband and wife gives them a strong feeling of being together before God."

The Culpeppers' church had women elders before the couple arrived. And the ministerial team was readily accepted into the church community. But still, there are problems.

The bright future of Missouri, based upon planned growth and a strong economy, is being threatened by a question that will appear on the November 2 election ballot. Because your pocketbook, your job and your entire lifestyle could be affected, it is important that you know all the facts.

This question, known as Proposition 1, seeks to change the method, followed in some form in 31 other states, that has proven to be the most efficient and least costly way to ensure that our citizens have available an adequate supply of electrical energy.

Electric companies obtain money to build new plants by borrowing money and by selling securities to investors. Proposition 1 would prohibit electric companies from including in their rates during the construction period the interest on funds borrowed to build new generating plants. People who loan money to build a new power plant expect to receive this interest currently; otherwise they will not put up the money required to build the plant. This is true of all businesses.

1. Proposition 1 could delay construction of power plants in Missouri, and these delays would add millions of dollars to the cost of the plants. These increased costs will result in higher electric bills.

2. The demand for electricity is expected to increase by at least 25 percent in our state over the next five years. Proposition 1 would make it extremely difficult for electric companies to finance the new construction necessary to supply the increased demand. Without the needed power, our industries could not expand, and new businesses would not move in. This would mean higher unemployment, a shrinking tax base and a lower standard of living. And, of course, the personal electrical needs of Missourians would not be met.

3. Many of the same people who oppose development of nuclear power in Missouri are using this issue as an attempt to halt construction of a nuclear plant being built in Callaway County. The fact is that passage of Proposition 1 could delay and possibly stop not only the Callaway plant, but other power plant construction in the state. A delay at Callaway alone would increase construction costs by over $8 million a month, or $96 million a year.

The more you know about Proposition 1, the less you'll like it.

By Tom Tiede

With the Ford Campaign — (NEA) — Gerald Ford never strays far from the playing fields of his imagination. This election season he is unwinding before audiences with sports jokes, explaining his positions with sports metaphors. He is even occasionally insisting that athletics may help this troubled country find itself once again.

In Florida he invited the jocks of America to help him in his fight against crime. He said athletes and not criminals should be the hero models for young people. He added that he has directed the Council of Physical Fitness and Sports to join state and local authorities to promote "team play rather than foul play among the young."

So saying, it may be that the President has dated himself. His memory of sports, though nice, could also be naive. Sports today is wonderful fun, most interesting, but not the answer to crime.

The name of the games, as coach after coach reminds us, is Win. And the pursuit of that goal is not entirely removed from the elements that create criminality: greed and excessiveness. In baseball a good pitcher will knock the batter down now and then; it's not legal but it's effective. Grantland Rice was a poet, not a realist.

Not everything in sports is so suspicious. But the trend has not been good. When Gerald Ford played center for the University of Michigan Wolverines, his dream was to cut down Bronko Nagurski. Today the players dream of filming deodorant commercials. That is better than holding up banks, admittedly, but one recalls that when lineman Alex Karras was caught making illegal bets on football games he was sentenced to serve with Howard Cosell on the Monday night TV program.

It should be pointed out that the pecularities of big-time sport have not evolved by accident. There is an extensive farm system for corruption in the system, beginning with the beginners, which is to say little leagues. Recently a coach in Bethesda, Md., was charged with giving his tykes diuretics (a drug to reduce weight), and responded that if the persecution against him continued, "I'm going to tell what really goes on in youth football — and I've seen it all."

What the coach has seen is the politics and atrocities of sports for teenagers and younger: the parent who employs the coach and hence has two sons in the starting lineup; the umpire who does business with one team's sponsor and so calls 'em the way prudence dictates. So it is that the children learn more than how, when behind the plate, to tip the bat as the opponent is swinging.

Then there is the prejudice. It has not changed in organized kids sports, it has merely shifted from color to sex. Last year in Michigan an 8-year-old girl was told she could not play on the baseball team unless she wore a plastic supporter cup like the boys. Rightly, she thought the idea was dumb, not to say bizarre, but it was the "rule." Her parents had to threaten court action to end the affair.

Small wonder that athletes often reach college and professional fields with less than a Frank Merriwell attitude. Boola boola has been replaced with moola moola, to coin a phrase. Stop the music — "what's in it for me?" Before his sad death last year, long distance runner Steven Prefontaine argued passionately that Olympic athletes should be paid; when asked if glory wasn't enough, he said flatly: "To hell with love of country, and the flag, I compete for myself."

No argument, athletes have changed since Ford vs. Nagurski. Or at least they are simply more honest. Today the most popular hero in sports is an unparalled egotist, draft dodger and admitted father of a child from a woman other than his wife. Muhammed Ali. One would almost prefer the youngsters read about Willie Sutton.

Royals don't "battle" in 5-3 loss to Yanks

"I didn't think we battled them," the 5-foot-4 shortstop moaned after the New York Yankees rallied for three sixthinning runs to beat the Royals 5-3 Tuesday night. "We turned from offense to defense."

Three of the first four Royals to face Dock Ellis in the first inning eventually scored, and the Royals seemed to have the Yankee starter on the ropes.

Only they couldn't deliver the knockout blow.

Patek says that's because they stopped punching.

"Three runs weren't enough," said Patek. "We didn't get more runs like we could have. We should have been more aggressive at the plate.

"You don't sit on a lead. You go out and get all you can."

But didn't Dock Ellis' improved pitching take the bats out of the hands of the Royals?

"I didn't think he was throwing good at all," Patek said. "He wasn't ineffective, however. We were. We had our chance. We just should have been more aggressive."

Patek, the glue to the Royals' defense, had one single in three at bats, but his defensive play at shortstop was simply sparkling. He charged grounders, he roamed far to his left and far to his right to throw out runners, handling eight chances flawlessly.

Patek says he feels at home with the Yankee Stadium grass, even though his home ballpark in Kansas City uses artificial turf.

"This stuff is fast. It has more bounce than artificial turf," he said. "It's cut real short. I guess you could call it artificial grass."

Patek may call it home, but Kansas City pitcher Larry Gura sees Yankee Stadium from a different perspective, as he faced New York ace Catfish Hunter today in Game 4, with the Royals one loss from elimination in the best-of-five series.

The left-handed Gura started the 1976 season with the Yankees. New York Manager Billy Martin thought Gura was "a nibbler who went to a lot of 3-2 counts and pitched a lot of 12-hitters."

In short, Martin didn't have faith in Gura, who said he was promised some work but never pitched an inning with the Yankees before being traded to Kansas City early in May.

"I'm just going to be excited to pitch in this ballpark," said Gura, who worked at Shea Stadium the past two seasons while Yankee Stadium was undergoing a facelift. "It will be my first time this season."

Asked if his feud with the feisty Martin was overpublicized, Gura said: "The heck with that stuff. I don't even want to talk about it. I just want to go out and play the game."

Today's pitching pairing was a rematch of Saturday's duel, in which Hunter fired a five-hitter and Gura gave up 12 hits in 8 2-3 innings in the Yankees' 4-1 victory.

Gura had started only two games during the regular season, pitching a total of 62 2-3 innings. He said he wasn't concerned about pitching with just three days' rest.

"I'd much rather go three days than three weeks," he said. "It doesn't matter. I can adjust to three or four days."

In picking Gura for this critical game, Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog cited Gura's ability to handle pressure and the fact that the Yankees have had more trouble with left-handers than righthanders this year.

"I'm more concerned about the three days' rest than anything," said Herzog. "He pitched super. I hope he pitches just as well as he did the other day."

Missouri defensive end Dale Smith put a quarterback-smashing rush on Kansas State's Wendell Henrikson in the 4th quarter of Missouri's 28-21 squeaker over the Wildcats last Saturday afternoon. Smith's pressure on the pass play resulted in a Missouri interception in the first Big 8 conference game of the year for both sides.

Lohr pleased by his offense

Downing the Mules of Central Missouri State University here on Saturday 29-26, the Tribe demonstrated a more explosive offensive attack than it had previously this season.

Said Head Coach Jim Lohr, "I'll tell you one thing, they sure played better. They moved the ball every way there was to move it."

The Indians racked up 314 yards in total offense, 176 yards on the ground and 138 through the air.

Commenting upon the balanced offensive effort, Lohr said, "Every time we had the ball we moved it well." He added that the performance showed a marked improvement in consistency and was good for his team's morale.

Leading the Tribe's ground attack was junior Jack Gokin of Kirkwood, who had his second consecutive 100-yard plus game. He picked up 119 yards and one touchdown on 17 carries.

Guiding the Indian offense was quarterback Don Backfisch of Dexter.

The junior signal-caller connected on seven passes in 16 attempts for 138 yards and two touchdowns, one of which was a 66-yard strike to senior flanker Terry Slattery of Cape Girardeau.

The Indian kicking game, which has faltered many times this season, also showed definite improvement.

Senior kicker Mike Wood of Kirkwood, who entered the contest with a 37.3 yard per punt average, found the range he had lacked all season, averaging 46 yards per punt on five kicks.

The All-American prospect also booted field goals of 40, 45, and 34 yards.

The defense, however, lacked the consistency it had shown in previous contests.

"It was fortunate we were able to win and play that poor defensively," said Lohr.

Entering the contest, the Indians defensive unit had allowed an average of 198 yards rushing and 118 yards passing per game.

Though holding the Mules to 174 yards on the ground, Indian defenders watched the Mules rack up 219 yards through the air.

However, 145 of those yards came on two plays, prompting Lohr to comment, "We made a number of fundamental mistakes and every time they burned us on them."

This weekend the Tribe travels to Maryville to tangle with the undefeated Bearcats of Northwest Missouri State University.

The Indians' record now stands at 4-2 overall, and 1-0 in MIAA action.

SHS golfers get second win

Coach Rosalie Snider's girls' golf team won its second match of the season when it edged Kennett by a pair of strokes, 228 to 230 Tuesday. Paulette Mather and Kennett's C. Baker were medalists, each shooting a 54.

Sikeston's youthful squad will try to use the win as a boost entering the district tournament at the Arcadia Valley Country Club on October 21. Competing with Sikeston will be five St. Louis County schools, Cape Central, Arcadia Valley and Viburnum.

"We'll certainly have our work cut out for us," noted coach Snider. "Ironton (Arcadia Valley) is a strong team and I understand that Viburnum has beaten them both times they've played."

"I don't know anything about how strong the St. Louis schools are."

Sikeston, a youthful and promising team, has been shooting in the 220-230 range this season. In a triangular meet with Cape and Sikeston, Arcadia Valley shot nearly 190 last week.

Scores in Tuesday's competition with Kennett were: Kennett (230) Baker 54, Woodard 56, Redman 56 and McDaniel 64; Sikeston (22[illegible] Mather 54, Betsy Sikes, 55, Jill Meyer 58 and Dawn Priday 61.

It's homecoming for Missouri's Dansdill

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The sophomore fullback on the University of Missouri's seventh-ranked football team scored his first collegiate touchdown last week.

And because he did, Iowa-born Rich Dansdill will probably have fewer jitters when the Tigers take on Iowa State in their homecoming game on Saturday.

"I guess people think I hold something against them, but it's possible I might not have gone to school there anyway," Dansdill said of the Cyclones, a Big Eight Conference rival.

"They really didn't go after me," he noted, however. "The University of Iowa and Ames are the places most of the guys from my hometown go. But they didn't send me any kind of feeler at all."

Dansdill, a 6-foot-4 product of Burlington Community High in Southeastern Iowa, was recruited by the University of Iowa.

"But they wanted me to play linebacker," he recalled. "I felt I wanted to be on offense, so when I heard from Missouri I came."

A year ago Dansdill was expected to spend his freshman year on the bench as a backup for a senior, John Blakeman.

Blakeman, however, was sidelined by an injury late in the season and Dansdill responded when given a starting assignment against Iowa State by gaining 116 yards on 13 carries.

"That was a big thrill but no bigger than last week when I got my first touchdown," the 225-pound Dansdill said.

"It couldn't have come at a better time," he said of a 31-yard run which lifted Missouri to its 28-21 triumph over stubborn Kansas State in the fourth quarter.

"It was a trap off tackle and we needed it," he added. "What happened in the game just proved that any team in the Big Eight is capable of beating any other."

Missouri, which has a 4-1 record, will be striving for its fourth straight victory at the expense of an Iowa State team boasting the same mark.

"They're improved," Dansdill maintained. "Their defense is completely rebuilt. I'm looking forward to it, not because it's my home state but because it's another game we have to have if we're going to win the title."

Reds win NL pennant

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds are like bottled lightning. You never know where or when they'll strike.

Manager Sparky Anderson's Reds looked like a beaten team in the ninth inning of Tuesday's third game in the best-of-five National League playoff game against the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Phillies led 6-4, and had ace reliever Ron Reed out there to assure their first victory in the series and stave off elimination. It certainly appeared that the Reds' fourth National League pennant clinching in six years would have to wait at least one more day.

But as Phillies' shortstop Larry Bowa would say later, the Reds never quit. First they bombed Reed for consecutive homers by George Foster and Johnny Bench. Then they bled the Phillies for the winning run in a 7-6 pennant clincher.

"I let them sacrifice the runner without an out," Underwood said after the game.

Pinch-hitter Ed Armbrister sacrificed the runners to second and third, and Pete Rose was intentionally walked. Ken Griffey, who lost the league batting title on the final day of the season, stepped to the plate.

Griffey, who probably beats out more infield hits than any other National League player, topped a ball toward first. Concepcion broke for home. The ball ticked off first baseman Bobby Tolan's glove and Concepcion streaked home.

A single, a walk, a sacrifice, a walk and an infield topper, and the Phillies were dead.

Despite his disappointment, Bowa, paid tribute to the Reds and predicted they'd blow out the American League champions in the World Series starting Saturday in Cincinnati.

"There was no luck involved," said Bowa. "They had more experience. They took advantage of every mistake we made. There was no excuse. We just got beat. They simply don't quit. I feel sorry for whoever plays them in the Series. I don't think there is a team over there (American League) who can compete with them."

Reed sat on the floor in an office by the clubhouse for at least a half-hour after the game. He was distraught.

"There is no way you blame anybody on this club but me for that loss," said the 6-foot-6 former pro basketball player. "I made two mistakes, and there was no excuse in the world for them. I hung a slider to Foster and threw Bench a high fastball."

Foster, who went to the plate in a 1-for-11 slump, said his eyes lit up when he saw the pitch in the middle of the plate.

"I had made up my mind to wait for a good pitch," said Foster, who hit 29 home runs in the regular season. He got it.

Bench, whose .234 batting average was the lowest in his storied 10-year career, said that after Foster's homer had reduced the Phillies' lead to 6-5, "I knew I was on the block. I wanted to hit one out more than anything."

Cards take on Dallas Sunday

A tie for the NFC Eastern Division lead is at stake Sunday when the St. Louis Cardinals entertain the Dallas Cowboys at Busch Memorial Stadium. Kickoff in the important battle is set for 3:05 p.m. local time.

The Cardinals stand 4-1 going into the game, one game behind the defending NFC champion Cowboys (5-0). The Big Red are coming off a 33-14 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles, while the Cowboys stayed undefeated with a 24-14 verdict over the New York Giants last week.

This week marks the beginning of the annual round-robin warfare between the Big Red, Cowboys and Redskins. Next Monday night, the Cardinals visit Washington, and six days later--on Sunday, October 31--Dallas travels to RFK Stadium to meet the Redskins.

Last year, the Cardinals captured their second successive NFC Eastern Division championship with a 11-3 record, one game ahead of Dallas. However, the Cowboys, wildcard playoff entries, went all the way to the Super Bowl, knocking off Minnesota and Los Angeles.

The two meetings between the teams were divided, with Dallas claiming a 37-31 overtime decision in the second week of the season in Texas Stadium and the Cardinals capturing undisputed possession of the division lead in week 12 with a 31-17 win in St. Louis.

Against the Eagles, the Big Red rushed for 198 yards (compared to 58 for Philadelphia), and quarterback Jim Hart was on target, completing 12 of 16 passes for 175 yards and a touchdown--a 49-yarder to wide receiver Mel Gray. Gray finished with six catches for 109 yards.

The Cardinals forced four Eagle turnovers and turned all four into touchdowns. Safeties Mike Sensibaugh and Clarence Duren intercepted passes and linebackers Mark Arneson and Tim Kearney recovered the fumbles.

Brock is new Cards coach

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The new manager of the St. Louis Cardinals says the National League club will be a "running team."

And in order to utilize the speed that is available, Vern Rapp said Tuesday, outfielder Lou Brock will take on additional duties as a coach.

"I called Lou on the phone and he bought the idea in less than five minutes," the 48-yearold Rapp said during an introductory news conference.

"Lou doesn't make up his mind on things quickly, but he jumped at this. He doesn't make up his mind quickly except when he's on base and I hope he continues that."

The 37-year-old Brock, who was in Cincinnati to watch the concluding game of the National League playoff, is second on baseball's all-time list of basestealers with 865 thefts.

"I want somebody with a positive knowledge of the National League, the strength and weakneses of the other players," Rapp said of his choosing Brock.

"Every team I've ever been associated with has been a running team. That's the way I play," Rapp added. "Who can better implement that style than the best baserunner and stealer in the game's history?"

In addition to Brock, Rapp named former Cards minor league player and manager Mo Mozzali, 54, as the club's hitting coach.

Three other coaches, Rapp said, will probably be named by the end of the week to succeed those let go when Red Schoendienst was fired as manager.

Two time Heisman trophy winner Archie Griffin, a 1976 freshman with the professional Cincinnati Bengals, is wearing the same number 45 he had during four seasons of football stardom at Ohio State University.

Ozark is 1976 Mgr. of Year

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies' Danny Ozark has been named manager of the year in the major leagues by Sporting News, a weekly publication.

Ozark, 52, outpolled the Kansas City Royals' Whitey Herzog by one vote in balloting for the honor among managers in the American and National leagues.

The Cincinnati Reds' George Foster was named National League player of the year and the New York Yankees' Thurman Munson the player of the year in the American League.

Royals don't "battle" in 5-3 loss to Yanks

"I didn't think we battled them," the 5-foot-4 shortstop moaned after the New York Yankees rallied for three sixthinning runs to beat the Royals 5-3 Tuesday night. "We turned from offense to defense."

Three of the first four Royals to face Dock Ellis in the first inning eventually scored, and the Royals seemed to have the Yankee starter on the ropes.

Only they couldn't deliver the knockout blow.

Patek says that's because they stopped punching.

"Three runs weren't enough," said Patek. "We didn't get more runs like we could have. We should have been more aggressive at the plate.

"You don't sit on a lead. You go out and get all you can."

But didn't Dock Ellis' improved pitching take the bats out of the hands of the Royals?

"I didn't think he was throwing good at all," Patek said. "He wasn't ineffective, however. We were. We had our chance. We just should have been more aggressive."

Patek, the glue to the Royals' defense, had one single in three at bats, but his defensive play at shortstop was simply sparkling. He charged grounders, he roamed far to his left and far to his right to throw out runners, handling eight chances flawlessly.

Patek says he feels at home with the Yankee Stadium grass, even though his home ballpark in Kansas City uses artificial turf.

"This stuff is fast. It has more bounce than artificial turf," he said. "It's cut real short. I guess you could call it artificial grass."

Patek may call it home, but Kansas City pitcher Larry Gura sees Yankee Stadium from a different perspective, as he faced New York ace Catfish Hunter today in Game 4, with the Royals one loss from elimination in the best-of-five series.

The left-handed Gura started the 1976 season with the Yankees. New York Manager Billy Martin thought Gura was "a nibbler who went to a lot of 3-2 counts and pitched a lot of 12-hitters."

In short, Martin didn't have faith in Gura, who said he was promised some work but never pitched an inning with the Yankees before being traded to Kansas City early in May.

"I'm just going to be excited to pitch in this ballpark," said Gura, who worked at Shea Stadium the past two seasons while Yankee Stadium was undergoing a facelift. "It will be my first time this season."

Asked if his feud with the feisty Martin was overpublicized, Gura said: "The heck with that stuff. I don't even want to talk about it. I just want to go out and play the game."

Today's pitching pairing was a rematch of Saturday's duel, in which Hunter fired a five-hitter and Gura gave up 12 hits in 8 2-3 innings in the Yankees' 4-1 victory.

Gura had started only two games during the regular season, pitching a total of 62 2-3 innings. He said he wasn't concerned about pitching with just three days' rest.

"I'd much rather go three days than three weeks," he said. "It doesn't matter. I can adjust to three or four days."

Despite his disappointment, Bowa, paid tribute to the Reds and predicted they'd blow out the American League champions in the World Series starting Saturday in Cincinnati.

"There was no luck involved," said Bowa. "They had more experience. They took advantage of every mistake we made. There was no excuse. We just got beat. They simply don't quit. I feel sorry for whoever plays them in the Series. I don't think there is a team over there (American League) who can compete with them."

Reed sat on the floor in an office by the clubhouse for at least a half-hour after the game. He was distraught.

"There is no way you blame anybody on this club but me for that loss," said the 6-foot-6 former pro basketball player. "I made two mistakes, and there was no excuse in the world for them. I hung a slider to Foster and threw Bench a high fastball."

Foster, who went to the plate in a 1-for-11 slump, said his eyes lit up when he saw the pitch in the middle of the plate.

"I had made up my mind to wait for a good pitch," said Foster, who hit 29 home runs in the regular season. He got it.

Bench, whose .234 batting average was the lowest in his storied 10-year career, said that after Foster's homer had reduced the Phillies' lead to 6-5, "I knew I was on the block. I wanted to hit one out more than anything."

Cards take on Dallas Sunday

A tie for the NFC Eastern Division lead is at stake Sunday when the St. Louis Cardinals entertain the Dallas Cowboys at Busch Memorial Stadium. Kickoff in the important battle is set for 3:05 p.m. local time.

The Cardinals stand 4-1 going into the game, one game behind the defending NFC champion Cowboys (5-0). The Big Red are coming off a 33-14 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles, while the Cowboys stayed undefeated with a 24-14 verdict over the New York Giants last week.

This week marks the beginning of the annual round-robin warfare between the Big Red, Cowboys and Redskins. Next Monday night, the Cardinals visit Washington, and six days later--on Sunday, October 31--Dallas travels to RFK Stadium to meet the Redskins.

Last year, the Cardinals captured their second successive NFC Eastern Division championship with a 11-3 record, one game ahead of Dallas. However, the Cowboys, wildcard playoff entries, went all the way to the Super Bowl, knocking off Minnesota and Los Angeles.

The two meetings between the teams were divided, with Dallas claiming a 37-31 overtime decision in the second week of the season in Texas Stadium and the Cardinals capturing undisputed possession of the division lead in week 12 with a 31-17 win in St. Louis.

Against the Eagles, the Big Red rushed for 198 yards (compared to 58 for Philadelphia), and quarterback Jim Hart was on target, completing 12 of 16 passes for 175 yards and a touchdown--a 49-yarder to wide receiver Mel Gray. Gray finished with six catches for 109 yards.

The Cardinals forced four Eagle turnovers and turned all four into touchdowns. Safeties Mike Sensibaugh and Clarence Duren intercepted passes and linebackers Mark Arneson and Tim Kearney recovered the fumbles.

Brock is new Cards coach

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The new manager of the St. Louis Cardinals says the National League club will be a "running team."

And in order to utilize the speed that is available, Vern Rapp said Tuesday, outfielder Lou Brock will take on additional duties as a coach.

"I called Lou on the phone and he bought the idea in less than five minutes," the 48-yearold Rapp said during an introductory news conference.

"Lou doesn't make up his mind on things quickly, but he jumped at this. He doesn't make up his mind quickly except when he's on base and I hope he continues that."

The 37-year-old Brock, who was in Cincinnati to watch the concluding game of the National League playoff, is second on baseball's all-time list of basestealers with 865 thefts.

"I want somebody with a positive knowledge of the National League, the strength and weakneses of the other players," Rapp said of his choosing Brock.

"Every team I've ever been associated with has been a running team. That's the way I play," Rapp added. "Who can better implement that style than the best baserunner and stealer in the game's history?"

In addition to Brock, Rapp named former Cards minor league player and manager Mo Mozzali, 54, as the club's hitting coach.

Three other coaches, Rapp said, will probably be named by the end of the week to succeed those let go when Red Schoendienst was fired as manager.

Two time Heisman trophy winner Archie Griffin, a 1976 freshman with the professional Cincinnati Bengals, is wearing the same number 45 he had during four seasons of football stardom at Ohio State University.

Ozark is 1976 Mgr. of Year

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies' Danny Ozark has been named manager of the year in the major leagues by Sporting News, a weekly publication.

Ozark, 52, outpolled the Kansas City Royals' Whitey Herzog by one vote in balloting for the honor among managers in the American and National leagues.

The Cincinnati Reds' George Foster was named National League player of the year and the New York Yankees' Thurman Munson the player of the year in the American League.

Stewart is big Mizzou threat

The one-year transformation of slotback Joe Stewart from an average-to-outstanding football player has to be high on the list of Mizzou's 1976 success stories.

The lean gazelle from Evanston, Ill., broke in as a freshman tailback two years ago, eventually yielding that job to Tony Galbreath. Last season Joe switched to slotback--and the adjustment was by no means easy or automatic.

He finished with 12 catches for 130 yards--and had 84 rushing yards on 15 carries. No touchdowns. Not exactly a rousing start.

This year? After five games, Stewart is the bell-cow of Big Eight receivers with 18 catches for 273 yards and two touchdowns. He has also gained 55 rushing yards on reverses, including another touchdown.

How does the fleet junior--timed in 4.4 seconds at 40 yards--feel about his emergency as a bona fide threat?

"Last year I think I was more of a decoy," he says. "Anywhere I play I'm happy--but I'm just glad to be doing my part--contributing to the team as best I can."

"It's just been a case of Joe becoming confident he can do some things," says Jamieson. "And we've taken greater pains to try and get him the ball, making it possible for him to show what he can do."

There's a little more involved, too, Jamieson indicates.

"He's had another year of looking at defenses...Plus, having Leo (Lewis) on the other side, with both capable of going deep, opens up things. Teams are spending a lot more time worrying about our throwing game right now than they did a year ago."

The 180-pound junior gave Mizzou's shaky situation at K-State at least two "confidence-builders" last Saturday. On both of the Tigers' second-half touchdown drives, Stewart hauled in difficult third-down passes, to offset a 21-14 KSU edge, while Mizzou's defense got much stickier.

Two local athletes honored

Larry Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jackson of 1120 Ruth St., and David Shell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Shell of 907 Crescent St., both in Sikeston, have been selected to Babe Ruth Baseball's Athletes of the Year program for 1976, as announced by Richard W. Case, President of the Babe Ruth International and Charles Miller, Sikeston Babe Ruth.

Nominations for Athletes of the Year were made earlier this summer by Babe Ruth league managers and presidents from across the nation. They were invited to nominate candidates with the best records of local achievement on their teams or in their leagues.

Criteria by which these local baseball players were nominated include the athlete's athletic ability, including statistics and overall performance, sportsmanship and personal leadership displayed during the season. To be eligible for the program, a player must have been an active participant in an officially recognized Babe Ruth league during the 1976 season.

The achievements of each local honoree will be presented in the 1976 edition of BABE RUTH BASEBALL ATHLETES OF THE YEAR Annual to be published in December. This respected chronical of the youth baseball season will be presented to the Baseball Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y. for permanent display.

Lake to open Sat.

The lake is a cooperative venture with the community contributing the land and the Department of Conservation building and maintaining the 110-acre lake just north of Charleston.

Dedication ceremonies are set for 1 p.m. Fish samples show a varied fish population.

Besides fishing, the lake preserves a sample of the wetland habitat that once covered most of the area. Outdoorsmen should find wood ducks, herons, beavers, muskrats and most of the other animals which once were so numerous in the vast swamps of the Bootheel.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ahmanson Gallery at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art is the site of a current exhibition of American decorative arts featuring blown and pressed glass objects from the 18th and 19th centuries.

Items on view include art glass by Louis Comfort Tiffany — an unusual laburnum design lamp, vases and service pieces of iridescent glass — and a selection of Staffordshire transferware from the Hinman-Garland collection. The Staffordshire pieces provide a view of American history as portrayed on English pottery created for the early 19th-century American market.

The exhibition, which will continue through Oct. 17, also contains American furniture of the period.

Blues acquire Gilles Marotte

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Gilles Marotte, a defenseman with 11 years National Hockey League experience, joined the St. Louis Blues Monday. He was acquired on waivers from the New York Rangers.

"Marotte played for me the better part of three seasons in New York," said Coach Emile Francis. "I know he'll give us depth at defense, which is an area we want to bone up."

"He's good at blocking shots, he's mobile and he hits people," Francis said. "He plays the left side, which is just what we've been looking for."

Marotte, 31, played 57 games for the Rangers last year, scoring four goals with 17 assists. He has also played for Boston, Chicago and Los Angeles.

Metcalf may return Sunday

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals say the status of running back Terry Metcalf is questionable for Sunday's National Football League game here against the Dallas Cowboys.

The 175-pound Metcalf, who was injured two weeks ago in a game against the New York Giants, sat out last Sunday's 33-14 Cards triumph over the Philadelphia Eagles.

"He's chomping at the bit," operations director Joe Sullivan said Tuesday of Metcalf, who has been idled by strained knee ligaments.

Wide receiver Ike Harris, who also missed the Philadelphia game, was listed as a probable participant against Dallas. Harris, too, has been idled by a knee injury.

Bernie, Bloomfield pick up win

ESSEX — Bernie and Bloomfield picked up first round victories in the Stoddard County volleyball tournament held here Tuesday night. In junior varsity action, Bloomfield and Dexter were winners.

Bernie took Puxico in a hard-fought series of games. The scores were: Bernie 15-12, 13-15 and 15-8. Bernie was the third-seeded team in the eight team tournament.

Bloomfield, seeded second, ripped Bell City 15-4 and 15-3.

In "B" action, Bloomfield won another easy match, 15-5 and 15-7 over Puxico. Dexter dropped the first game, but won the two-of-three match over Woodland, 9-15, 15-8 and 15-10.

Ellis sounds like record

NEW YORK (AP) — Dock Ellis, the unlikely winning pitcher after falling behind 3-0 in the first inning, sounded like a broke record following the New York Yankees' 5-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals Tuesday night in the American League playoffs.

"It gives us a 2-1 edge," Ellis replied when asked how big a game it really was. Then he was asked to compare it to other big games in his career.

"It gives us a 2-1 edge," he repeated.

Herzog defends his strategy during loss

"I'd do it again," said Herzog, who waved in four relief pitchers during the Yankees' three-run uprising that gave New York a 5-3 victory and a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five American League championship baseball series.

7Royals' starter Andy Hassler was nursing a 3-2 laad into the sith, when he issued a leadoff walk to Roy White. He then surrenderednThurman Munson's double, prompting Herzog to call for his first relief pitcher, right-hander Marty Pattin.

Yankee Manager Billy Martin parried by lifting right-handed hitting Lou Piniella in favor of left-handed swinging Carlos May, who was given an intentional walk.

"With a one-run lead, I brought in Pattin to pitch to one batter—regardless," Herzog said.

"Tom Hall has done very well for me in situations like this against left-handed hitters," Herzog said. "And in these cases, he's been more effective than Steve."

Hall, 1-1 with a 4.45 ERA for the Royals, gave up Chris Chambliss' RBI grounder for the tying run. He then yielded Graig Nettles' screaming liner to center field for the go-ahead run of the inning.

At this point, Herzog brought in Mingori, who was greeted by Elliott Maddox' run-scoring double. That chased Mingori in favor of Mark Littell, who worked out of the inning.

Yankee starter Dock Ellis, with ninth inning relief help from Sparky Lyle, closed the door on the Royals after they scored three runs in the first inning.

Freddie Patek, whose massive range at shortstop belies his 5'4" stature, said the Royals died after taking their 3-0 lead.

"I didn't think Ellis was throwing good at all," said Patek. "He wasn't ineffective, however, we were.

"I just didn't think we battled them. We turned from offense to defense. You don't sit on a lead. You go get all you can."

"It gives us a 2-1 edge," he repeated.

Herzog defends his strategy during loss

"I'd do it again," said Herzog, who waved in four relief pitchers during the Yankees' three-run uprising that gave New York a 5-3 victory and a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five American League championship baseball series.

7Royals' starter Andy Hassler was nursing a 3-2 laad into the sith, when he issued a leadoff walk to Roy White. He then surrenderednThurman Munson's double, prompting Herzog to call for his first relief pitcher, right-hander Marty Pattin.

Yankee Manager Billy Martin parried by lifting right-handed hitting Lou Piniella in favor of left-handed swinging Carlos May, who was given an intentional walk.

"With a one-run lead, I brought in Pattin to pitch to one batter—regardless," Herzog said.

"Tom Hall has done very well for me in situations like this against left-handed hitters," Herzog said. "And in these cases, he's been more effective than Steve."

Hall, 1-1 with a 4.45 ERA for the Royals, gave up Chris Chambliss' RBI grounder for the tying run. He then yielded Graig Nettles' screaming liner to center field for the go-ahead run of the inning.

At this point, Herzog brought in Mingori, who was greeted by Elliott Maddox' run-scoring double. That chased Mingori in favor of Mark Littell, who worked out of the inning.

Yankee starter Dock Ellis, with ninth inning relief help from Sparky Lyle, closed the door on the Royals after they scored three runs in the first inning.

Freddie Patek, whose massive range at shortstop belies his 5'4" stature, said the Royals died after taking their 3-0 lead.

"I didn't think Ellis was throwing good at all," said Patek. "He wasn't ineffective, however, we were.

"I just didn't think we battled them. We turned from offense to defense. You don't sit on a lead. You go get all you can."

Royals don't "battle" in 5-3 loss to Yanks

"I didn't think we battled them," the 5-foot-4 shortstop moaned after the New York Yankees rallied for three sixthinning runs to beat the Royals 5-3 Tuesday night. "We turned from offense to defense."

Three of the first four Royals to face Dock Ellis in the first inning eventually scored, and the Royals seemed to have the Yankee starter on the ropes.

Only they couldn't deliver the knockout blow.

Patek says that's because they stopped punching.

"Three runs weren't enough," said Patek. "We didn't get more runs like we could have. We should have been more aggressive at the plate.

"You don't sit on a lead. You go out and get all you can."

But didn't Dock Ellis' improved pitching take the bats out of the hands of the Royals?

"I didn't think he was throwing good at all," Patek said. "He wasn't ineffective, however. We were. We had our chance. We just should have been more aggressive."

Patek, the glue to the Royals' defense, had one single in three at bats, but his defensive play at shortstop was simply sparkling. He charged grounders, he roamed far to his left and far to his right to throw out runners, handling eight chances flawlessly.

Patek says he feels at home with the Yankee Stadium grass, even though his home ballpark in Kansas City uses artificial turf.

"This stuff is fast. It has more bounce than artificial turf," he said. "It's cut real short. I guess you could call it artificial grass."

Patek may call it home, but Kansas City pitcher Larry Gura sees Yankee Stadium from a different perspective, as he faced New York ace Catfish Hunter today in Game 4, with the Royals one loss from elimination in the best-of-five series.

The left-handed Gura started the 1976 season with the Yankees. New York Manager Billy Martin thought Gura was "a nibbler who went to a lot of 3-2 counts and pitched a lot of 12-hitters."

In short, Martin didn't have faith in Gura, who said he was promised some work but never pitched an inning with the Yankees before being traded to Kansas City early in May.

"I'm just going to be excited to pitch in this ballpark," said Gura, who worked at Shea Stadium the past two seasons while Yankee Stadium was undergoing a facelift. "It will be my first time this season."

Asked if his feud with the feisty Martin was overpublicized, Gura said: "The heck with that stuff. I don't even want to talk about it. I just want to go out and play the game."

Today's pitching pairing was a rematch of Saturday's duel, in which Hunter fired a five-hitter and Gura gave up 12 hits in 8 2-3 innings in the Yankees' 4-1 victory.

Gura had started only two games during the regular season, pitching a total of 62 2-3 innings. He said he wasn't concerned about pitching with just three days' rest.

"I'd much rather go three days than three weeks," he said. "It doesn't matter. I can adjust to three or four days."

In picking Gura for this critical game, Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog cited Gura's ability to handle pressure and the fact that the Yankees have had more trouble with left-handers than righthanders this year.

"I'm more concerned about the three days' rest than anything," said Herzog. "He pitched super. I hope he pitches just as well as he did the other day."

Missouri defensive end Dale Smith put a quarterback-smashing rush on Kansas State's Wendell Henrikson in the 4th quarter of Missouri's 28-21 squeaker over the Wildcats last Saturday afternoon. Smith's pressure on the pass play resulted in a Missouri interception in the first Big 8 conference game of the year for both sides.

Lohr pleased by his offense

Downing the Mules of Central Missouri State University here on Saturday 29-26, the Tribe demonstrated a more explosive offensive attack than it had previously this season.

Said Head Coach Jim Lohr, "I'll tell you one thing, they sure played better. They moved the ball every way there was to move it."

The Indians racked up 314 yards in total offense, 176 yards on the ground and 138 through the air.

Commenting upon the balanced offensive effort, Lohr said, "Every time we had the ball we moved it well." He added that the performance showed a marked improvement in consistency and was good for his team's morale.

Leading the Tribe's ground attack was junior Jack Gokin of Kirkwood, who had his second consecutive 100-yard plus game. He picked up 119 yards and one touchdown on 17 carries.

The junior signal-caller connected on seven passes in 16 attempts for 138 yards and two touchdowns, one of which was a 66-yard strike to senior flanker Terry Slattery of Cape Girardeau.

The Indian kicking game, which has faltered many times this season, also showed definite improvement.

Senior kicker Mike Wood of Kirkwood, who entered the contest with a 37.3 yard per punt average, found the range he had lacked all season, averaging 46 yards per punt on five kicks.

The All-American prospect also booted field goals of 40, 45, and 34 yards.

"It was fortunate we were able to win and play that poor defensively," said Lohr.

Entering the contest, the Indians defensive unit had allowed an average of 198 yards rushing and 118 yards passing per game.

Though holding the Mules to 174 yards on the ground, Indian defenders watched the Mules rack up 219 yards through the air.

However, 145 of those yards came on two plays, prompting Lohr to comment, "We made a number of fundamental mistakes and every time they burned us on them."

This weekend the Tribe travels to Maryville to tangle with the undefeated Bearcats of Northwest Missouri State University.

The Indians' record now stands at 4-2 overall, and 1-0 in MIAA action.

SHS golfers get second win

Coach Rosalie Snider's girls' golf team won its second match of the season when it edged Kennett by a pair of strokes, 228 to 230 Tuesday. Paulette Mather and Kennett's C. Baker were medalists, each shooting a 54.

Sikeston's youthful squad will try to use the win as a boost entering the district tournament at the Arcadia Valley Country Club on October 21. Competing with Sikeston will be five St. Louis County schools, Cape Central, Arcadia Valley and Viburnum.

"We'll certainly have our work cut out for us," noted coach Snider. "Ironton (Arcadia Valley) is a strong team and I understand that Viburnum has beaten them both times they've played."

"I don't know anything about how strong the St. Louis schools are."

Sikeston, a youthful and promising team, has been shooting in the 220-230 range this season. In a triangular meet with Cape and Sikeston, Arcadia Valley shot nearly 190 last week.

Scores in Tuesday's competition with Kennett were: Kennett (230) Baker 54, Woodard 56, Redman 56 and McDaniel 64; Sikeston (228) Mather 54, Betsy Sikes, 55, Jill Meyer 58 and Dawn Priday 61.

It's homecoming for Missouri's Dansdill

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The sophomore fullback on the University of Missouri's seventh-ranked football team scored his first collegiate touchdown last week.

And because he did, Iowa-born Rich Dansdill will probably have fewer jitters when the Tigers take on Iowa State in their homecoming game on Saturday.

"I guess people think I hold something against them, but it's possible I might not have gone to school there anyway," Dansdill said of the Cyclones, a Big Eight Conference rival.

"They really didn't go after me," he noted, however. "The University of Iowa and Ames are the places most of the guys from my hometown go. But they didn't send me any kind of feeler at all."

Dansdill, a 6-foot-4 product of Burlington Community High in Southeastern Iowa, was recruited by the University of Iowa.

"But they wanted me to play linebacker," he recalled. "I felt I wanted to be on offense, so when I heard from Missouri I came."

A year ago Dansdill was expected to spend his freshman year on the bench as a backup for a senior, John Blakeman.

Blakeman, however, was sidelined by an injury late in the season and Dansdill responded when given a starting assignment against Iowa State by gaining 116 yards on 13 carries.

"That was a big thrill but no bigger than last week when I got my first touchdown," the 225-pound Dansdill said.

"It couldn't have come at a better time," he said of a 31-yard run which lifted Missouri to its 28-21 triumph over stubborn Kansas State in the fourth quarter.

"It was a trap off tackle and we needed it," he added. "What happened in the game just proved that any team in the Big Eight is capable of beating any other."

Missouri, which has a 4-1 record, will be striving for its fourth straight victory at the expense of an Iowa State team boasting the same mark.

"They're improved," Dansdill maintained. "Their defense is completely rebuilt. I'm looking forward to it, not because it's my home state but because it's another game we have to have if we're going to win the title."

Reds win NL pennant

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds are like bottled lightning. You never know where or when they'll strike.

Manager Sparky Anderson's Reds looked like a beaten team in the ninth inning of Tuesday's third game in the best-of-five National League playoff game against the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Phillies led 6-4, and had ace reliever Ron Reed out there to assure their first victory in the series and stave off elimination. It certainly appeared that the Reds' fourth National League pennant clinching in six years would have to wait at least one more day.

But as Phillies' shortstop Larry Bowa would say later, the Reds never quit. First they bombed Reed for consecutive homers by George Foster and Johnny Bench. Then they bled the Phillies for the winning run in a 7-6 pennant clincher.

"I let them sacrifice the runner without an out," Underwood said after the game.

Pinch-hitter Ed Armbrister sacrificed the runners to second and third, and Pete Rose was intentionally walked. Ken Griffey, who lost the league batting title on the final day of the season, stepped to the plate.

Griffey, who probably beats out more infield hits than any other National League player, topped a ball toward first. Concepcion broke for home. The ball ticked off first baseman Bobby Tolan's glove and Concepcion streaked home.

A single, a walk, a sacrifice, a walk and an infield topper, and the Phillies were dead.

Despite his disappointment, Bowa, paid tribute to the Reds and predicted they'd blow out the American League champions in the World Series starting Saturday in Cincinnati.

"There was no luck involved," said Bowa. "They had more experience. They took advantage of every mistake we made. There was no excuse. We just got beat. They simply don't quit. I feel sorry for whoever plays them in the Series. I don't think there is a team over there (American League) who can compete with them."

Reed sat on the floor in an office by the clubhouse for at least a half-hour after the game. He was distraught.

"There is no way you blame anybody on this club but me for that loss," said the 6-foot-6 former pro basketball player. "I made two mistakes, and there was no excuse in the world for them. I hung a slider to Foster and threw Bench a high fastball."

Foster, who went to the plate in a 1-for-11 slump, said his eyes lit up when he saw the pitch in the middle of the plate.

"I had made up my mind to wait for a good pitch," said Foster, who hit 29 home runs in the regular season. He got it.

Bench, whose .234 batting average was the lowest in his storied 16-year career, said that after Foster's homer had reduced the Phillies' lead to 6-5, "I knew I was on the block. I wanted to hit one out more than anything."

Cards take on Dallas Sunday

A tie for the NFC Eastern Division lead is at stake Sunday when the St. Louis Cardinals entertain the Dallas Cowboys at Busch Memorial Stadium. Kickoff in the important battle is set for 3:05 p.m. local time.

The Cardinals stand 4-1 going into the game, one game behind the defending NFC champion Cowboys (5-0). The Big Red are coming off a 33-14 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles, while the Cowboys stayed undefeated with a 24-14 verdict over the New York Giants last week.

This week marks the beginning of the annual round-robin warfare between the Big Red, Cowboys and Redskins. Next Monday night, the Cardinals visit Washington, and six days later--on Sunday, October 31--Dallas travels to RFK Stadium to meet the Redskins.

Last year, the Cardinals captured their second successive NFC Eastern Division championship with a 11-3 record, one game ahead of Dallas. However, the Cowboys, wildcard playoff entries, went all the way to the Super Bowl, knocking off Minnesota and Los Angeles.

The two meetings between the teams were divided, with Dallas claiming a 37-31 overtime decision in the second week of the season in Texas Stadium and the Cardinals capturing undisputed possession of the division lead in week 12 with a 31-17 win in St. Louis.

Against the Eagles, the Big Red rushed for 198 yards (compared to 58 for Philadelphia), and quarterback Jim Hart was on target, completing 12 of 16 passes for 175 yards and a touchdown--a 49-yarder to wide receiver Mel Gray. Gray finished with six catches for 109 yards.

The Cardinals forced four Eagle turnovers and turned all four into touchdowns. Safeties Mike Sensibaugh and Clarence Duren intercepted passes and linebackers Mark Arneson and Tim Kearney recovered the fumbles.

Brock is new Cards coach

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The new manager of the St. Louis Cardinals says the National League club will be a "running team."

And in order to utilize the speed that is available, Vern Rapp said Tuesday, outfielder Lou Brock will take on additional duties as a coach.

"I called Lou on the phone and he bought the idea in less than five minutes," the 48-yearold Rapp said during an introductory news conference.

"Lou doesn't make up his mind on things quickly, but he jumped at this. He doesn't make up his mind quickly except when he's on base and I hope he continues that."

The 37-year-old Brock, who was in Cincinnati to watch the concluding game of the National League playoff, is second on baseball's all-time list of basestealers with 865 thefts.

"I want somebody with a positive knowledge of the National League, the strength and weakneses of the other players," Rapp said of his choosing Brock.

"Every team I've ever been associated with has been a running team. That's the way I play," Rapp added. "Who can better implement that style than the best baserunner and stealer in the game's history?"

In addition to Brock, Rapp named former Cards minor league player and manager Mo Mozzali, 54, as the club's hitting coach.

Three other coaches, Rapp said, will probably be named by the end of the week to succeed those let go when Red Schoendienst was fired as manager.

Two time Heisman trophy winner Archie Griffin, a 1976 freshman with the professional Cincinnati Bengals, is wearing the same number 45 he had during four seasons of football stardom at Ohio State University.

Ozark is 1976 Mgr. of Year

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies' Danny Ozark has been named manager of the year in the major leagues by Sporting News, a weekly publication.

Ozark, 52, outpolled the Kansas City Royals' Whitey Herzog by one vote in balloting for the honor among managers in the American and National leagues.

The Cincinnati Reds' George Foster was named National League player of the year and the New York Yankees' Thurman Munson the player of the year in the American League.

Lohr pleased by his offense

Downing the Mules of Central Missouri State University here on Saturday 29-26, the Tribe demonstrated a more explosive offensive attack than it had previously this season.

Said Head Coach Jim Lohr, "I'll tell you one thing, they sure played better. They moved the ball every way there was to move it."

The Indians racked up 314 yards in total offense, 176 yards on the ground and 138 through the air.

Commenting upon the balanced offensive effort, Lohr said, "Every time we had the ball we moved it well." He added that the performance showed a marked improvement in consistency and was good for his team's morale.

Leading the Tribe's ground attack was junior Jack Gokin of Kirkwood, who had his second consecutive 100-yard plus game. He picked up 119 yards and one touchdown on 17 carries.

The junior signal-caller connected on seven passes in 16 attempts for 138 yards and two touchdowns, one of which was a 66-yard strike to senior flanker Terry Slattery of Cape Girardeau.

The Indian kicking game, which has faltered many times this season, also showed definite improvement.

Senior kicker Mike Wood of Kirkwood, who entered the contest with a 37.3 yard per punt average, found the range he had lacked all season, averaging 46 yards per punt on five kicks.

The All-American prospect also booted field goals of 40, 45, and 34 yards.

"It was fortunate we were able to win and play that poor defensively," said Lohr.

Entering the contest, the Indians defensive unit had allowed an average of 198 yards rushing and 118 yards passing per game.

Though holding the Mules to 174 yards on the ground, Indian defenders watched the Mules rack up 219 yards through the air.

However, 145 of those yards came on two plays, prompting Lohr to comment, "We made a number of fundamental mistakes and every time they burned us on them."

This weekend the Tribe travels to Maryville to tangle with the undefeated Bearcats of Northwest Missouri State University.

The Indians' record now stands at 4-2 overall, and 1-0 in MIAA action.

SHS golfers get second win

Coach Rosalie Snider's girls' golf team won its second match of the season when it edged Kennett by a pair of strokes, 228 to 230 Tuesday. Paulette Mather and Kennett's C. Baker were medalists, each shooting a 54.

Sikeston's youthful squad will try to use the win as a boost entering the district tournament at the Arcadia Valley Country Club on October 21. Competing with Sikeston will be five St. Louis County schools, Cape Central, Arcadia Valley and Viburnum.

"We'll certainly have our work cut out for us," noted coach Snider. "Ironton (Arcadia Valley) is a strong team and I understand that Viburnum has beaten them both times they've played."

"I don't know anything about how strong the St. Louis schools are."

Sikeston, a youthful and promising team, has been shooting in the 220-230 range this season. In a triangular meet with Cape and Sikeston, Arcadia Valley shot nearly 190 last week.

Scores in Tuesday's competition with Kennett were: Kennett (230) Baker 54, Woodard 56, Redman 56 and McDaniel 64; Sikeston (228) Mather 54, Betsy Sikes, 55, Jill Meyer 58 and Dawn Priday 61.

It's homecoming for Missouri's Dansdill

And because he did, Iowa-born Rich Dansdill will probably have fewer jitters when the Tigers take on Iowa State in their homecoming game on Saturday.

"I guess people think I hold something against them, but it's possible I might not have gone to school there anyway," Dansdill said of the Cyclones, a Big Eight Conference rival.

"They really didn't go after me," he noted, however. "The University of Iowa and Ames are the places most of the guys from my hometown go. But they didn't send me any kind of feeler at all."

Dansdill, a 6-foot-4 product of Burlington Community High in Southeastern Iowa, was recruited by the University of Iowa.

"But they wanted me to play linebacker," he recalled. "I felt I wanted to be on offense, so when I heard from Missouri I came."

A year ago Dansdill was expected to spend his freshman year on the bench as a backup for a senior, John Blakeman.

Blakeman, however, was sidelined by an injury late in the season and Dansdill responded when given a starting assignment against Iowa State by gaining 116 yards on 13 carries.

"That was a big thrill but no bigger than last week when I got my first touchdown," the 225-pound Dansdill said.

"It couldn't have come at a better time," he said of a 31-yard run which lifted Missouri to its 28-21 triumph over stubborn Kansas State in the fourth quarter.

"It was a trap off tackle and we needed it," he added. "What happened in the game just proved that any team in the Big Eight is capable of beating any other."

Missouri, which has a 4-1 record, will be striving for its fourth straight victory at the expense of an Iowa State team boasting the same mark.

"They're improved," Dansdill maintained. "Their defense is completely rebuilt. I'm looking forward to it, not because it's my home state but because it's another game we have to have if we're going to win the title."

Reds win NL pennant

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds are like bottled lightning. You never know where or when they'll strike.

Manager Sparky Anderson's Reds looked like a beaten team in the ninth inning of Tuesday's third game in the best-of-five National League playoff game against the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Phillies led 6-4, and had ace reliever Ron Reed out there to assure their first victory in the series and stave off elimination. It certainly appeared that the Reds' fourth National League pennant clinching in six years would have to wait at least one more day.

But as Phillies' shortstop Larry Bowa would say later, the Reds never quit. First they bombed Reed for consecutive homers by George Foster and Johnny Bench. Then they bled the Phillies for the winning run in a 7-6 pennant clincher.

"I let them sacrifice the runner without an out," Underwood said after the game.

Pinch-hitter Ed Armbrister sacrificed the runners to second and third, and Pete Rose was intentionally walked. Ken Griffey, who lost the league batting title on the final day of the season, stepped to the plate.

Griffey, who probably beats out more infield hits than any other National League player, topped a ball toward first. Concepcion broke for home. The ball ticked off first baseman Bobby Tolan's glove and Concepcion streaked home.

A single, a walk, a sacrifice, a walk and an infield topper, and the Phillies were dead.

Despite his disappointment, Bowa, paid tribute to the Reds and predicted they'd blow out the American League champions in the World Series starting Saturday in Cincinnati.

"There was no luck involved," said Bowa. "They had more experience. They took advantage of every mistake we made. There was no excuse. We just got beat. They simply don't quit. I feel sorry for whoever plays them in the Series. I don't think there is a team over there (American League) who can compete with them."

Reed sat on the floor in an office by the clubhouse for at least a half-hour after the game. He was distraught.

"There is no way you blame anybody on this club but me for that loss," said the 6-foot-6 former pro basketball player. "I made two mistakes, and there was no excuse in the world for them. I hung a slider to Foster and threw Bench a high fastball."

Foster, who went to the plate in a 1-for-11 slump, said his eyes lit up when he saw the pitch in the middle of the plate.

"I had made up my mind to wait for a good pitch," said Foster, who hit 29 home runs in the regular season. He got it.

Bench, whose .234 batting average was the lowest in his storied 10-year career, said that after Foster's homer had reduced the Phillies' lead to 6-5, "I knew I was on the block. I wanted to hit one out more than anything."

Cards take on Dallas Sunday

A tie for the NFC Eastern Division lead is at stake Sunday when the St. Louis Cardinals entertain the Dallas Cowboys at Busch Memorial Stadium. Kickoff in the important battle is set for 3:05 p.m. local time.

The Cardinals stand 4-1 going into the game, one game behind the defending NFC champion Cowboys (5-0). The Big Red are coming off a 33-14 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles, while the Cowboys stayed undefeated with a 24-14 verdict over the New York Giants last week.

This week marks the beginning of the annual round-robin warfare between the Big Red, Cowboys and Redskins. Next Monday night, the Cardinals visit Washington, and six days later--on Sunday, October 31--Dallas travels to RFK Stadium to meet the Redskins.

Last year, the Cardinals captured their second successive NFC Eastern Division championship with a 11-3 record, one game ahead of Dallas. However, the Cowboys, wildcard playoff entries, went all the way to the Super Bowl, knocking off Minnesota and Los Angeles.

The two meetings between the teams were divided, with Dallas claiming a 37-31 overtime decision in the second week of the season in Texas Stadium and the Cardinals capturing undisputed possession of the division lead in week 12 with a 31-17 win in St. Louis.

Against the Eagles, the Big Red rushed for 198 yards (compared to 58 for Philadelphia), and quarterback Jim Hart was on target, completing 12 of 16 passes for 175 yards and a touchdown--a 49-yarder to wide receiver Mel Gray. Gray finished with six catches for 109 yards.

The Cardinals forced four Eagle turnovers and turned all four into touchdowns. Safeties Mike Sensibaugh and Clarence Duren intercepted passes and linebackers Mark Arneson and Tim Kearney recovered the fumbles.

Brock is new Cards coach

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The new manager of the St. Louis Cardinals says the National League club will be a "running team."

And in order to utilize the speed that is available, Vern Rapp said Tuesday, outfielder Lou Brock will take on additional duties as a coach.

"I called Lou on the phone and he bought the idea in less than five minutes," the 48-yearold Rapp said during an introductory news conference.

"Lou doesn't make up his mind on things quickly, but he jumped at this. He doesn't make up his mind quickly except when he's on base and I hope he continues that."

The 37-year-old Brock, who was in Cincinnati to watch the concluding game of the National League playoff, is second on baseball's all-time list of basestealers with 865 thefts.

"I want somebody with a positive knowledge of the National League, the strength and weakneses of the other players," Rapp said of his choosing Brock.

"Every team I've ever been associated with has been a running team. That's the way I play," Rapp added. "Who can better implement that style than the best baserunner and stealer in the game's history?"

In addition to Brock, Rapp named former Cards minor league player and manager Mo Mozzali, 54, as the club's hitting coach.

Three other coaches, Rapp said, will probably be named by the end of the week to succeed those let go when Red Schoendienst was fired as manager.

Two time Heisman trophy winner Archie Griffin, a 1976 freshman with the professional Cincinnati Bengals, is wearing the same number 45 he had during four seasons of football stardom at Ohio State University.

Ozark is 1976 Mgr. of Year

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies' Danny Ozark has been named manager of the year in the major leagues by Sporting News, a weekly publication.

Ozark, 52, outpolled the Kansas City Royals' Whitey Herzog by one vote in balloting for the honor among managers in the American and National leagues.

The Cincinnati Reds' George Foster was named National League player of the year and the New York Yankees' Thurman Munson the player of the year in the American League.

Stewart is big Mizzou threat

The one-year transformation of slotback Joe Stewart from an average-to-outstanding football player has to be high on the list of Mizzou's 1976 success stories.

The lean gazelle from Evanston, Ill., broke in as a freshman tailback two years ago, eventually yielding that job to Tony Galbreath. Last season Joe switched to slotback--and the adjustment was by no means easy or automatic.

He finished with 12 catches for 130 yards--and had 84 rushing yards on 15 carries. No touchdowns. Not exactly a rousing start.

This year? After five games, Stewart is the bell-cow of Big Eight receivers with 18 catches for 273 yards and two touchdowns. He has also gained 55 rushing yards on reverses, including another touchdown.

How does the fleet junior--timed in 4.4 seconds at 40 yards--feel about his emergency as a bona fide threat?

"Last year I think I was more of a decoy," he says. "Anywhere I play I'm happy--but I'm just glad to be doing my part--contributing to the team as best I can."

"It's just been a case of Joe becoming confident he can do some things," says Jamieson. "And we've taken greater pains to try and get him the ball, making it possible for him to show what he can do."

There's a little more involved, too, Jamieson indicates.

"He's had another year of looking at defenses...Plus, having Leo (Lewis) on the other side, with both capable of going deep, opens up things. Teams are spending a lot more time worrying about our throwing game right now than they did a year ago."

The 180-pound junior gave Mizzou's shaky situation at K-State at least two "confidence-builders" last Saturday. On both of the Tigers' second-half touchdown drives, Stewart hauled in difficult third-down passes, to offset a 21-14 KSU edge, while Mizzou's defense got much stickier.

Two local athletes honored

Larry Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jackson of 1120 Ruth St., and David Shell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Shell of 907 Crescent St., both in Sikeston, have been selected to Babe Ruth Baseball's Athletes of the Year program for 1976, as announced by Richard W. Case, President of the Babe Ruth International and Charles Miller, Sikeston Babe Ruth.

Nominations for Athletes of the Year were made earlier this summer by Babe Ruth league managers and presidents from across the nation. They were invited to nominate candidates with the best records of local achievement on their teams or in their leagues.

Criteria by which these local baseball players were nominated include the athlete's athletic ability, including statistics and overall performance, sportsmanship and personal leadership displayed during the season. To be eligible for the program, a player must have been an active participant in an officially recognized Babe Ruth league during the 1976 season.

The achievements of each local honoree will be presented in the 1976 edition of BABE RUTH BASEBALL ATHLETES OF THE YEAR Annual to be published in December. This respected chronical of the youth baseball season will be presented to the Baseball Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y. for permanent display.

Lake to open Sat.

The lake is a cooperative venture with the community contributing the land and the Department of Conservation building and maintaining the 110-acre lake just north of Charleston.

Dedication ceremonies are set for 1 p.m. Fish samples show a varied fish population.

Besides fishing, the lake preserves a sample of the wetland habitat that once covered most of the area. Outdoorsmen should find wood ducks, herons, beavers, muskrats and most of the other animals which once were so numerous in the vast swamps of the Bootheel.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ahmanson Gallery at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art is the site of a current exhibition of American decorative arts featuring blown and pressed glass objects from the 18th and 19th centuries.

Items on view include art glass by Louis Comfort Tiffany — an unusual laburnum design lamp, vases and service pieces of iridescent glass — and a selection of Staffordshire transferware from the Hinman-Garland collection. The Staffordshire pieces provide a view of American history as portrayed on English pottery created for the early 19th-century American market.

The exhibition, which will continue through Oct. 17, also contains American furniture of the period.

Blues acquire Gilles Marotte

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Gilles Marotte, a defenseman with 11 years National Hockey League experience, joined the St. Louis Blues Monday. He was acquired on waivers from the New York Rangers.

"Marotte played for me the better part of three seasons in New York," said Coach Emile Francis. "I know he'll give us depth at defense, which is an area we want to bone up."

"He's good at blocking shots, he's mobile and he hits people," Francis said. "He plays the left side, which is just what we've been looking for."

Marotte, 31, played 57 games for the Rangers last year, scoring four goals with 17 assists. He has also played for Boston, Chicago and Los Angeles.

Metcalf may return Sunday

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals say the status of running back Terry Metcalf is questionable for Sunday's National Football League game here against the Dallas Cowboys.

The 175-pound Metcalf, who was injured two weeks ago in a game against the New York Giants, sat out last Sunday's 33-14 Cards triumph over the Philadelphia Eagles.

"He's chomping at the bit," operations director Joe Sullivan said Tuesday of Metcalf, who has been idled by strained knee ligaments.

Wide receiver Ike Harris, who also missed the Philadelphia game, was listed as a probable participant against Dallas. Harris, too, has been idled by a knee injury.

Bernie, Bloomfield pick up win

ESSEX — Bernie and Bloomfield picked up first round victories in the Stoddard County volleyball tournament held here Tuesday night. In junior varsity action, Bloomfield and Dexter were winners.

Bernie took Puxico in a hard-fought series of games. The scores were: Bernie 15-12, 13-15 and 15-8. Bernie was the third-seeded team in the eight team tournament.

Bloomfield, seeded second, ripped Bell City 15-4 and 15-3.

In "B" action, Bloomfield won another easy match, 15-5 and 15-7 over Puxico. Dexter dropped the first game, but won the two-of-three match over Woodland, 9-15, 15-8 and 15-10.

Ellis sounds like record

NEW YORK (AP) — Dock Ellis, the unlikely winning pitcher after falling behind 3-0 in the first inning, sounded like a broke record following the New York Yankees' 5-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals Tuesday night in the American League playoffs.

"It gives us a 2-1 edge," Ellis replied when asked how big a game it really was. Then he was asked to compare it to other big games in his career.

"It gives us a 2-1 edge," he repeated.

Herzog defends his strategy during loss

"I'd do it again," said Herzog, who waved in four relief pitchers during the Yankees' three-run uprising that gave New York a 5-3 victory and a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five American League championship baseball series.

7Royals' starter Andy Hassler was nursing a 3-2 laad into the sith, when he issued a leadoff walk to Roy White. He then surrenderednThurman Munson's double, prompting Herzog to call for his first relief pitcher, right-hander Marty Pattin.

"With a one-run lead, I brought in Pattin to pitch to one batter—regardless," Herzog said.

"Tom Hall has done very well for me in situations like this against left-handed hitters," Herzog said. "And in these cases, he's been more effective than Steve."

Hall, 1-1 with a 4.45 ERA for the Royals, gave up Chris Chambliss' RBI grounder for the tying run. He then yielded Graig Nettles' screaming liner to center field for the go-ahead run of the inning.

At this point, Herzog brought in Mingori, who was greeted by Elliott Maddox' run-scoring double. That chased Mingori in favor of Mark Littell, who worked out of the inning.

Yankee starter Dock Ellis, with ninth inning relief help from Sparky Lyle, closed the door on the Royals after they scored three runs in the first inning.

Freddie Patek, whose massive range at shortstop belies his 5'4" stature, said the Royals died after taking their 3-0 lead.

"I didn't think Ellis was throwing good at all," said Patek. "He wasn't ineffective, however, we were.

"I just didn't think we battled them. We turned from offense to defense. You don't sit on a lead. You go get all you can."

Stewart is big Mizzou threat

The one-year transformation of slotback Joe Stewart from an average-to-outstanding football player has to be high on the list of Mizzou's 1976 success stories.

The lean gazelle from Evanston, Ill., broke in as a freshman tailback two years ago, eventually yielding that job to Tony Galbreath. Last season Joe switched to slotback--and the adjustment was by no means easy or automatic.

He finished with 12 catches for 130 yards--and had 84 rushing yards on 15 carries. No touchdowns. Not exactly a rousing start.

This year? After five games, Stewart is the bell-cow of Big Eight receivers with 18 catches for 273 yards and two touchdowns. He has also gained 55 rushing yards on reverses, including another touchdown.

How does the fleet junior--timed in 4.4 seconds at 40 yards--feel about his emergency as a bona fide threat?

"Last year I think I was more of a decoy," he says. "Anywhere I play I'm happy--but I'm just glad to be doing my part--contributing to the team as best I can."

"It's just been a case of Joe becoming confident he can do some things," says Jamieson. "And we've taken greater pains to try and get him the ball, making it possible for him to show what he can do."

There's a little more involved, too, Jamieson indicates.

"He's had another year of looking at defenses...Plus, having Leo (Lewis) on the other side, with both capable of going deep, opens up things. Teams are spending a lot more time worrying about our throwing game right now than they did a year ago."

The 180-pound junior gave Mizzou's shaky situation at K-State at least two "confidence-builders" last Saturday. On both of the Tigers' second-half touchdown drives, Stewart hauled in difficult third-down passes, to offset a 21-14 KSU edge, while Mizzou's defense got much stickier.

Blues acquire Gilles Marotte

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Gilles Marotte, a defenseman with 11 years National Hockey League experience, joined the St. Louis Blues Monday. He was acquired on waivers from the New York Rangers.

"Marotte played for me the better part of three seasons in New York," said Coach Emile Francis. "I know he'll give us depth at defense, which is an area we want to bone up."

"He's good at blocking shots, he's mobile and he hits people," Francis said. "He plays the left side, which is just what we've been looking for."

Marotte, 31, played 57 games for the Rangers last year, scoring four goals with 17 assists. He has also played for Boston, Chicago and Los Angeles.

Two local athletes honored

Larry Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jackson of 1120 Ruth St., and David Shell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Shell of 907 Crescent St., both in Sikeston, have been selected to Babe Ruth Baseball's Athletes of the Year program for 1976, as announced by Richard W. Case, President of the Babe Ruth International and Charles Miller, Sikeston Babe Ruth.

Nominations for Athletes of the Year were made earlier this summer by Babe Ruth league managers and presidents from across the nation. They were invited to nominate candidates with the best records of local achievement on their teams or in their leagues.

Criteria by which these local baseball players were nominated include the athlete's athletic ability, including statistics and overall performance, sportsmanship and personal leadership displayed during the season. To be eligible for the program, a player must have been an active participant in an officially recognized Babe Ruth league during the 1976 season.

The achievements of each local honoree will be presented in the 1976 edition of BABE RUTH BASEBALL ATHLETES OF THE YEAR Annual to be published in December. This respected chronical of the youth baseball season will be presented to the Baseball Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y. for permanent display.

Lake to open Sat.

The lake is a cooperative venture with the community contributing the land and the Department of Conservation building and maintaining the 110-acre lake just north of Charleston.

Dedication ceremonies are set for 1 p.m. Fish samples show a varied fish population.

Besides fishing, the lake preserves a sample of the wetland habitat that once covered most of the area. Outdoorsmen should find wood ducks, herons, beavers, muskrats and most of the other animals which once were so numerous in the vast swamps of the Bootheel.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ahmanson Gallery at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art is the site of a current exhibition of American decorative arts featuring blown and pressed glass objects from the 18th and 19th centuries.

Items on view include art glass by Louis Comfort Tiffany — an unusual laburnum design lamp, vases and service pieces of iridescent glass — and a selection of Staffordshire transferware from the Hinman-Garland collection. The Staffordshire pieces provide a view of American history as portrayed on English pottery created for the early 19th-century American market.

The exhibition, which will continue through Oct. 17, also contains American furniture of the period.

Metcalf may return Sunday

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals say the status of running back Terry Metcalf is questionable for Sunday's National Football League game here against the Dallas Cowboys.

The 175-pound Metcalf, who was injured two weeks ago in a game against the New York Giants, sat out last Sunday's 33-14 Cards triumph over the Philadelphia Eagles.

"He's chomping at the bit," operations director Joe Sullivan said Tuesday of Metcalf, who has been idled by strained knee ligaments.

Wide receiver Ike Harris, who also missed the Philadelphia game, was listed as a probable participant against Dallas. Harris, too, has been idled by a knee injury.

Bernie, Bloomfield pick up win

ESSEX — Bernie and Bloomfield picked up first round victories in the Stoddard County volleyball tournament held here Tuesday night. In junior varsity action, Bloomfield and Dexter were winners.

Bernie took Puxico in a hard-fought series of games. The scores were: Bernie 15-12, 13-15 and 15-8. Bernie was the third-seeded team in the eight team tournament.

Bloomfield, seeded second, ripped Bell City 15-4 and 15-3.

In "B" action, Bloomfield won another easy match, 15-5 and 15-7 over Puxico. Dexter dropped the first game, but won the two-of-three match over Woodland, 9-15, 15-8 and 15-10.

Ellis sounds like record

NEW YORK (AP) — Dock Ellis, the unlikely winning pitcher after falling behind 3-0 in the first inning, sounded like a broke record following the New York Yankees' 5-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals Tuesday night in the American League playoffs.

"It gives us a 2-1 edge," Ellis replied when asked how big a game it really was. Then he was asked to compare it to other big games in his career.

"It gives us a 2-1 edge," he repeated.

Herzog defends his strategy during loss

"I'd do it again," said Herzog, who waved in four relief pitchers during the Yankees' three-run uprising that gave New York a 5-3 victory and a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five American League championship baseball series.

7Royals' starter Andy Hassler was nursing a 3-2 laad into the sith, when he issued a leadoff walk to Roy White. He then surrenderednThurman Munson's double, prompting Herzog to call for his first relief pitcher, right-hander Marty Pattin.

"With a one-run lead, I brought in Pattin to pitch to one batter—regardless," Herzog said.

"Tom Hall has done very well for me in situations like this against left-handed hitters," Herzog said. "And in these cases, he's been more effective than Steve."

Hall, 1-1 with a 4.45 ERA for the Royals, gave up Chris Chambliss' RBI grounder for the tying run. He then yielded Graig Nettles' screaming liner to center field for the go-ahead run of the inning.

At this point, Herzog brought in Mingori, who was greeted by Elliott Maddox' run-scoring double. That chased Mingori in favor of Mark Littell, who worked out of the inning.

Yankee starter Dock Ellis, with ninth inning relief help from Sparky Lyle, closed the door on the Royals after they scored three runs in the first inning.

Freddie Patek, whose massive range at shortstop belies his 5'4" stature, said the Royals died after taking their 3-0 lead.

"I didn't think Ellis was throwing good at all," said Patek. "He wasn't ineffective, however, we were.

"I just didn't think we battled them. We turned from offense to defense. You don't sit on a lead. You go get all you can."

On the lightside!

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The city water department shut off the water to Mayor Charles Wheeler's home this week because he failed to pay his bill. Water department officials say they're embarrassed, but the mayor says he learned a lesson.

A water department spokesman said Tuesday that Wheeler's 866.76 bill was more than 30 days past due, so a worker turned his water off.

"We had a shut-off notice. We sent a man out to turn the water off, and then we got this call from the mayor's office," said Roy Jackson, deputy water director.

"God, it was embarrassing," Jackson said, adding that as soon as he learned of it, the boss' water was turned back on.

Wheeler's reaction was different. "Wasn't that grand?" he said.

Wheeler said he was late because of the press of business, but was paying his bill about the same time his water was shut off.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Early in September, a woman tap-danced across the Golden Gate Bridge. A few weeks later, a man dressed in a giant peacock costume skied across the span.

Now meet Kostas Pappas, clad in oversized sunglasses, beanie and short pants, who has saluted the city by roller skating from one end of the bridge to the other in the name of art.

"A lot of people do a lot of different things for art," said the 22-year-old Pappas after his feat Monday. "I decided to skate across a body of water. It seemed appropriate because Columbus sailed across a body of water."

Pappas, a recent graduate of Virginia Commonwealth University, said he skated in New York subways last Thanksgiving as a tribute to that city.

"Idea, they say, is art," he concluded.

WOONSOCKET, R.I. (AP) — Confession can be good for the soul, even if you happen to be a Roman Catholic bishop.

The Most Rev. Louis E. Gelineau, bishop of the Diocese of Providence, applied that philosophy when he got a parking ticket.

"It serves me right!" Gelineau wrote to the police department. "I should have noticed the no-parking sign — but I didn't. Confession is good for the soul — so I confess!! Best regards. L.G."

Police said a $5 check on the bishop's personal account was included in the envelope.

Policewoman charged with shoplifting

DEXTER — Dexter policewoman Dorothy Childers has been arrested by members of the police department and has been charged with shoplifting, police reports indicated Monday.

Mrs. Childers, who was a street crossing guard near Southwest Elementary School, was arrested for an incident that allegedly occurred Saturday in a downtown store.

Mayor Willis Conner said Mrs. Childers has not been suspended, pending the outcome of her hearing before the city police judge.

FT. CAMPBELL, Ky. — Army Cpl. Tommy L. Gant, son of Mrs. Annie D. Hines of East Prairie, Mo., Route Two, is one of the thousands of American and Allied troops taking part in NATO Exercise Reforger 76 in Germany.

Reforger 76 is two separate major field training exercises conducted in the states of Bavaria and Hessen, Germany. It includes participating elements of North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces of the U.S., Belgium, Canada and Germany.

Different from past reforgers, this year a U.S. - based unit was deployed to Europe with its equipment instead of picking up equipment already stored. Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands are playing an active part in receiving and deploying equipment from areas in their countries.

Cpl. Gant is regularly assigned as an Army maintenance manager system clerk with the 101st Airborne Division at Ft. Campbell.

He is a 1974 graduate of East Prairie High School.

Studies are being made on 'prolongevity'

NEW YORK (AP) — Is there a "death hormone" in the human brain that limits how long you can live?

Does such a hormone regulate a kind of "clock" ticking off the potential days of your life? If so, might scientific research become able to identify it, then find ways to halt or delay its action, thus extending life span 50 to 100 or 200 years, or even longer?

So also is supposition that the "clock" resides in the genetic material, the DNA, in the nucleus of body cells. If so, might man become able to turn off the clock, extending life?

These are but two of the theories about aging, some buttressed a bit by experimental evidence, described in a new book, "Prolongevity," by Albert Rosenfeld, a science writer.

Some researchers "are convinced there is an identifiable 'clock of aging,' a genetically determined program which dictates that we will age and die, and the rate at which this will occur," he says.

Rosenfeld thinks that "we have an excellent chance of discovering the location (there may be more than one) of the clock of aging, as well as the nature of its operating mechanisms — and how to interfere with them to our own advantage."

Moreover, "all this can begin to happen now, not centuries from now, but now, if only the research can be carried out."

Rosenfeld, formerly science editor of Life and now science editor of Saturday Review, says many people have considered it a pipe dream that human lifespan can be extended. He discusses research and theories which he says "suddenly transform the pipe dream into at least a reasonable fantasy, and perhaps a reality we can plan for ... we will soon have in our hands the biological tools to bring about, in a practical manner, the long-sought elixir of life, in one form or another."

"Old age will be a disease you can go see your doctor about, if, indeed, prophylactic measures do not virtually eradicate it."

As to why we age, Rosenfeld examines a number of theories. Is it due to an accumulation of chemical "garbage" that cells have difficulty in getting rid of, or is it due to cross-linkage, an inadvertant coupling of any two large molecules inside or outside cells? Is either of these a result of aging rather than a cause?

Is aging due to an autoimmune process, in which the body turns upon itself? Or does it result from free-radicals, which are broken off pieces of molecules or molecules with an electron stripped away, that then attach to and damage other molecules?

A long and baffling road to discoverq lies ahead to understand and control life processes. If it indeed can ever be done, to bring the human life span any considerable leap forward, Rosenfeld says.

Would people welcome a life twice the present normal span, or extended by 200 to 300 years?

"Many people are downright hostile to the idea," he writes.

At what age would people retire? At 65, then live another vigorous and healthy 65 years? Would old people stay in their top jobs and keep younger ones from promotion? What would happen to Social Security, pension plans, insurance commitments?

If people lived to be 200 or 300, think of the population pressure, unless births were severely limited.

Rosenfeld's own opinion, is that the research should be done. Further research into aging would go hand in glove with research to control of cancer, heart disease, and degenerative diseases, with findings in some fields applicable to extending life-span.

People might be motivated to care more about posterity, about maintaining clean air and water, "if we ourselves were to become posterity...

"There could arise a new breed of human being who, merely by virtue of his longevity, through the acquisition of a steadily maturing wisdom and a steadily expanding awareness, could finally become exactly the kind of gifted individual we need to help take our species into a challenging and expanded future — a being to whom we might entrust the decisions that go with controlling the mechanisms of life, a being worthy to be the trustee of our future evolution to a destiny of our own choosing."

Studies are being made on 'prolongevity'

NEW YORK (AP) — Is there a "death hormone" in the human brain that limits how long you can live?

Does such a hormone regulate a kind of "clock" ticking off the potential days of your life? If so, might scientific research become able to identify it, then find ways to halt or delay its action, thus extending life span 50 to 100 or 200 years, or even longer?

So also is supposition that the "clock" resides in the genetic material, the DNA, in the nucleus of body cells. If so, might man become able to turn off the clock, extending life?

These are but two of the theories about aging, some buttressed a bit by experimental evidence, described in a new book, "Prolongevity," by Albert Rosenfeld, a science writer.

Some researchers "are convinced there is an identifiable 'clock of aging,' a genetically determined program which dictates that we will age and die, and the rate at which this will occur," he says.

Rosenfeld thinks that "we have an excellent chance of discovering the location (there may be more than one) of the clock of aging, as well as the nature of its operating mechanisms — and how to interfere with them to our own advantage."

Moreover, "all this can begin to happen now, not centuries from now, but now, if only the research can be carried out."

Rosenfeld, formerly science editor of Life and now science editor of Saturday Review, says many people have considered it a pipe dream that human lifespan can be extended. He discusses research and theories which he says "suddenly transform the pipe dream into at least a reasonable fantasy, and perhaps a reality we can plan for ... we will soon have in our hands the biological tools to bring about, in a practical manner, the long-sought elixir of life, in one form or another."

"Old age will be a disease you can go see your doctor about, if, indeed, prophylactic measures do not virtually eradicate it."

As to why we age, Rosenfeld examines a number of theories. Is it due to an accumulation of chemical "garbage" that cells have difficulty in getting rid of, or is it due to cross-linkage, an inadvertant coupling of any two large molecules inside or outside cells? Is either of these a result of aging rather than a cause?

Is aging due to an autoimmune process, in which the body turns upon itself? Or does it result from free-radicals, which are broken off pieces of molecules or molecules with an electron stripped away, that then attach to and damage other molecules?

A long and baffling road to discoverq lies ahead to understand and control life processes, if it indeed can ever be done, to bring the human life span any considerable leap forward, Rosenfeld says.

Would people welcome a life twice the present normal span, or extended by 200 to 300 years?

"Many people are downright hostile to the idea," he writes.

At what age would people retire? At 65, then live another vigorous and healthy 65 years? Would old people stay in their top jobs and keep younger ones from promotion? What would happen to Social Security, pension plans, insurance commitments?

If people lived to be 200 or 300, think of the population pressure, unless births were severely limited.

Rosenfeld's own opinion, is that the research should be done. Further research into aging would go hand in glove with research to control of cancer, heart disease, and degenerative diseases, with findings in some fields applicable to extending life-span.

People might be motivated to care more about posterity, about maintaining clean air and water, "if we ourselves were to become posterity ...

"There could arise a new breed of human being who, merely by virtue of his longevity, through the acquisition of a steadily maturing wisdom and a steadily expanding awareness, could finally become exactly the kind of gifted individual we need to help take our species into a challenging and expanded future — a being to whom we might entrust the decisions that go with controlling the mechanisms of life, a being worthy to be the trustee of our future evolution to a destiny of our own choosing."

Associated Press Writer

President Ford says he has "a pretty good batting average" in giving leadership compared with Jimmy Carter, despite the Earl Butz affair and confusion over Ford's statements on Eastern Europe and the Arab boycott of Israel.

As Ford was launching a tour of New York and New Jersey on Tuesday, Democratic nominee Jimmy Carter began a two-day rest at his home in Plains, Ga., before his own trip to NewYork on Thursday.

A new Gallup Poll showed the two candidates nearly neck-and-neck in their race for the White House, but the poll results were admittedly outdated before their release.

George Gallup Sr. said the polling results taken just before last Thursday's debate in San Francisco show Carter and Ford "just about even." The Washington Post said the figures show Carter leading Ford by 47 to 45 per cent.

Gallup said, "We are making a new poll, but the figures aren't all in yet." He said early returns from the new poll show Carter regaining some of the ground he had lost.

But Gallup denied a report in the Post that the new poll will show a Carter gain of as much as 10 per cent. Gallup said, "No, that's totally wrong" when asked about the Post figures.

Ford traveled by motorcade through crowded New York streets, was picketed and heckled at some points and cheered at others.

The two vice presidential candidates, Democratic Sen. Walter Mondale and Republican Sen. Bob Dole, spent Tuesday preparing for their nationally televised debate Friday night, but Dole also campaigned in Tennessee.

Ford met late Tuesday with a group of New York news executives and was asked about Democratic charges that he showed poor leadership in dealing with three recent incidents: The obscene slur about blacks by Butz; Ford's statement in last week's debate that the Soviets do not dominate Eastern Europe; and confusion over his stand on releasing the names of U.S. corporations that cooperate with the Arab boycott.

But Ford said, "On a comparative basis, I think my leadership, if you take those kinds of things, is a pretty good batting average and (Carter) is a minor leaguer.

Ford cited the Sinai agreement and U.S. efforts to mediate disputes in southern Africa as "the things that count as leadership, not the shopping list" of troubles that has plagued the Ford campaign.

Ford has been criticized by Democrats for his failure to fire Butz for making the obscene racial remark. Butz finally offered his resignation.

But Ford told the New York news executives it would have been wrong to "shoot from the hip" on the Butz case.

Ford accused Carter of doing that in the recent dispute over FBI Director Clarence Kelley. Carter had said if he were in Ford's job he would have fired Kelley for permitting FBI employes to do work at his home and for accepting gifts from subordinates. Ford, who refused to fire Kelley, said Carter "ended up looking a little ridiculous."

Earlier, in Brooklyn, Ford was faced with a small crowd of protesters waving signs and chanting "save Soviet Jewry." In a high school speech there, the President said he had always opposed the Arab boycott against Israel and against U.S. firms that hire Jews.

During the debate last week with Carter in San Francisco, Ford had said he was ordering the Commerce Department to make public the names of U.S. firms that have cooperated with the boycott.

But he said Tuesday that he meant only that any new companies that join the boycotting the future will be exposed and not the estimated hundreds of firms that have reported their participation up to now.

Ford began his day Tuesday at the White House, where he reversed the position he took in last week's debate when he said "there is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe."

4-week-old auto strike has ended

DETROIT (AP) — Workers at a handful of Ford Motor Co. plants dusted off the machinery so assembly lines could start up today after the United Auto Workers narrowly ratified a national contract to settle a four-week-old strike.

But it will be at least several days before the firm's 102 facilities in 22 states get back to normal because of unresolved local contract disputes at key manufacturing plants.

Production workers ratified the accord 35,192 to 22,026, while skilled tradesmen — who could have vetoed it and prolonged the walkout — approved it 8,957 to 8,468.

Within an hour of the union's announcement late Tuesday that the three-year pact had been approved, sevaral dozen workers began arriving at Ford's transmission plant in suburban Livonia, Mich., where the firm had hastily slated a midnight shift.

The No. 2 auto maker said one of its 18 car and truck assembly plants — in Wixom, Mich. — would reopen this afternoon, while assembly lines in Los Angeles, Chicago and Norfolk, Va., would begin rolling again on Thursday. A company spokesman said manufacturing plants with local contracts also would begin reopening today.

The spokesman said 29 of 99 UAW-Ford bargaining locals still were without three-year local agreements — including units at six assembly plants and nearly a dozen engine, stamping and parts plants vital to the firm's production network.

UAW President Leonard Woodcock said workers will remain on strike at facilities without local pacts. Ford labor vice president Sidney F. McKenna expressed hope for rapid settlement of the remaining local disputes "so the strike can be terminated completely."

Ratification came exactly one week to the hour after bargainers announced a tentative settlement and 28 days after some 170,000 workers walked off their jobs.

Union officials had feared the often rebellious tradesmen might turn down the settlement and force bargainers to renegotiate the package.

The 25,000 Ford tradesmen — including millwrights, toolmakers, repairmen and machinists — were given veto power even though they are outnumbered 6 to 1 by production workers.

What's the law?

The case of the untelling politician

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Barry was a businessman who believed that there was more wrong with the country than there was with him. Consequently, he decided to run for public office to effectuate more pruning and less grafting. As far as he was concerned, the government was living beyond its income, as well as everyone else's, and he was going to help put an end to it.

Unfortunately, he didn't get very far. His campaign was suddenly stalled by a state law that required all candidates to disclose their sources of income and their business investments -- which Barry refused to do.

"The disclosure law is totally unconstitutional," he insisted. "It violates my right of privacy. My holdings are a personal matter and, as a practical matter, they concern only me and no one else."

"That's not so," responded a state official. "Secret holdings can have a telling effect. And what they could tell the public is not to vote for you."

The dispute ended up in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you require untelling Barry to disclose all under the state law?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that one who volunteers himself as a candidate for public office thereby becomes a public figure. Requiring him to make certain financial disclosures so as to enable the public to assess possible conflicts of interest, does not, by this limited invasion of privacy, deprive him of any protected constitutional right.

(Based upon a 1976 Supreme Court Decision)

The National Automobile Club says El Monte in Los Angeles County marked the end of the Santa Fe Trail in California's early days.

Lifting Experience

It was at the World's Fair in New York in 1854 that the elevator industry got off the ground. An ingenious mechanic from Yonkers, Elisha Groves Otis, demonstrated a hoisting device at the Crystal Palace that had a safety catch to keep the platform from plummeting. Otis would raise himself to the ceiling and dramatically slash the rope as spectators gasped and paled. Then he would proclaim, "All safe, gentlemen. All safe!"

The plant will be placed on a section about 300 feet square on the southeast corner of the first 5-acre plot.

The council had planned to place the plant on school property, but when the public protested, it changed its mind.

would assume that in the next five or 10 years we are going to see some industrial growth in Sikeston.

The new power plant will be using southern Illinois coal which is generally high sulfur. Will this cause any pollution problems in Sikeston?

No. The plant will be designed to meet all state and federal environmental regulations. We will install scrubbers on the plant. The scrubbers take out the sulfuric oxide and cleanup the emissions.

Will there be any problem in selling the bonds?

No. At least, we were told by the bond people that because of our good record in the past of paying off bond issues, there would be no problem.

I-SC school board opposes Amendment 2

SCOTT CITY — The Illmo-Scott City R-1 school board Monday night went on record opposing the passage of Amdnement Two in the Nov. 2 General Election and urged all members to work for the defeat of the amendment.

The board said if approved, Amendment Two, which would remove the sales tax from food and drugs would result in a loss of $140 million a year in tax revenues to the State of Missouri and $40 million a year in tax revenues to cities and bus systems levying a local sales tax.

Amendment Two makes no provisions for replacing these lost revenues, thus raising the threat of much higher income of sales taxes well as substantially curtailed government services.

The revised budget for the 1976-1977 school year, with anticipated expenditures and receipts for the year in the amount of $1,333,000, was discussed and approved.

Mrs. Mary Ann Weisenborn, lunchroom supervisor, reported to the board concerning Government commodities, cost and operation of the program to date and of a new procedure for tickets of those eating in the program.

Mrs. Weisenborn said the new procedure is designed to have a more accurate count of those eating in order to do away with shortage for loss servings.

Superintendent J.A. Holmes reported on the Governor's Conference on Education, which is designed to get lay people's ideas, as well as educators' ideas, concerning improvements and possibly changes in the Foundation Program to be recommended to the next legislature.

Holmes, also reported that the Commissioner of Education would conduct a workshop at New Madrid, Oct. 26 in which board members are invited to attend. The board agreed to be represented.

He also noted that the annual joint meeting of superintendents and school boards of the state would be conducted in Columbia Nov. 21, 22, and 23.

Holmes added that a workshop for board members, administrators and teachers would be conducted in Cape Girardeau Oct. 28, from 5:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

The board also authorized the Kiwanis Club to hold it's annual grade school tournament on Nov. 19, 20 and 21. Proceeds are used for underprivileged children in the area.

Tax revenue loss is meeting topic

DEXTER— Revenue from taxes, and their possible loss, was a main topic of discussion at a short meeting Tuesday night of the Board of Education.

Supt. Thurston Hill told the board that if the present assessment ratio in Stoddard County continues, it could cost the district about $44,000 in state aid per year.

Hill explained that the ratio, a percentage of the "real" evaluation of property, is set by the state tax commission and is used as the base on which taxes are paid and is part of the formula used by the state in distributing state aid to school districts.

According to the state tax commission, Stoddard County had a tax assessment ratio of 28.5 pr cent in 1975, but was ordered last year to reduce it to 13.2 per cent, Hill said.

This lower figure is then used to compute the amount of taxes paid and how much state aid a district is entitled to receive.

Much of the discussion by the board was how to get around this difficulty-- which Hill said all districts face -- but could come up with no solution.

The board also expressed opposition to Amendment Two which would remove sales tax on food and drugs. The amendment will be voted on in the Nov. 2 election.

Hill said if approved, the amendment would cost the district about $157,000 per year in lost tax revenue, and that it would take a $1.60 increase in the local property tax rate to offset the loss.

In other business, the board instructed Hill to secure bids for two school buses for the 1977-78 school year, and Hill reported an increase in enrollment in the district.

He said that there were a total of 2,296 students enrolled in the district at the end of the first month of school, 59 more than at the same time last year.

This is at a time when other districts in the country have decreasing enrollment.

Hill said that for the last five years the Dexter school enrollment have been increasing about 50 per year, and is due almost entirely to population growth in the area.

The local tavern has just concocted a moon shot: near-vacuum in the glass.

Priorities are discussed

Charleston city council holds public hearing on community development

CHARLESTON — Citizens petitions were approved, bids for two new police cars were accepted and a public hearing on the 1977-78 community development priorities was held Tuesday night during the regular session of the City Council.

During the discussion on Community development priorities, it was pointed out that a portion of the $1 million expected for next year's program is committed to acquisition of property along E. Marshall St. for widening and installation of sanitary and storm sewers.

Edward Graham, a member of the board of directors for the Mississippi County Child Development Center, requested that the council again include the center in the coming year's C.D. program. He told the group that the center, which has been in operation two years, averages 35 children per day, 75 per cent of them from Charleston.

Graham also requested that the council, which has final approval over all C.D. projects, increase this year's donation to $1,800 from the previous $1,500 donation so that employes of the center can be given a salary increase.

A community buuilding was another topic of discussion for C.D. funds. It was noted that residents expressed their approval for the building's construction during a popular opinion poll taken in the Aug. 3 primary election.

It was pointed out that the next year's program would be the only feasible year for construction of the centersince the following year's funds is expected to be only $600,000, decreasing to $400,000 for next year.

Another hearing on C.D. priorities is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. tonight in the council chambers at City Hall.

In other action, the council approved a petition from downtown merchants presented by Frank Bihr, to re-install parking meters on Commercial and Market streets, along one block east and west of Main Street.

Since the removal of the meters last month, Bihr, said downtown employes had been parking their cars along the street, creating a shortage of parking places for shoppers.

The council passed a motion to increase parking fines from 25 cents to 50 cents for the first violation. If not paid within 24 hours, the fine will be raised to one dollar.

A petition presented by an attorney, requesting the removal of one panel in the wrought iron railing on the west side of N. Main Street between the offices of Dr. Wilbur L. Davis and Dr. Gregorio Rodriguez was approved.

The petition had also requested a limited or emergency parking only zone be designated in front of the doctors' offices for the convenience of incapacitated patients being transported to and from the office by ambulance and private cars.

A study of the parking request will be made by City Manager Willis Downs before council action is taken.

The council accepted a bid of $9,175, including trade-in of two cars, 1964 and 1966 models, from Ponder Chevrolet-Buick Co. for two intermediate size police cars.

The other bid submitted was for $9,750, less trade-in, from Courtesy Ford Co.

Police Chief Bob Ritchey was authorized to purchase three citizens band radios for installation in police cars.

A public hearing will be held Nov. 9 in conjunction with the council meeting to discuss amending regulations of the Home Occupation Ordinance. The recommendation for changes was made by the planning and zoning commission.

Downs reported the city has received its revenue sharing check for $23,097.

During the report of this year's C.D. program, given by Director Tanna Parish, the council was informed that bids for the renovation of the swimming pool bathhouse had been taken Tuesday with the low bid being $39,789, which, according to Parish, was still excessive.

Parish said it was his feeling that a new bathhouse could be built for about the same cost. The council approved having plans for a new one drawn up.

Progress on the park at the south interchange of the city was also reported by parish. A bid of $8,095.50 for dirtwork on the ditches in the park was approved.

The council voted to go on record as opposing Amendment Two, pertaining to the abolishment of sales tax on food and drugs in the Nov. 2 election.

One of the best ways to get into a fight is to serve on the church harmony committee.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PARENTS OF OUR CUSTOMERS

The phrase, "kids will be kids", doesn't mean today what it used to. We know, as you do, that today wherever young people gather, whether at drive-in restaurants, at school, at the movies or in private homes, they may be exposed to problems from time to time. We also know that from time to time incidents occur at public places which we would all like to avoid.

We want to assure you that at SKATE WORLD we recognize our responsibility to you when we have your children. In keeping with that responsibility, we always have on duty, in addition to our regular crew, no less than two mature adults whose duty it is to see that order and discipline are maintained. We "watch out" for your kids like we would want you to do for ours. In the past we have not hesitated to send "trouble-makers" home and have not hesitated, when necessary, to seek the assistance of local law enforcement personnel.

We plan to keep SKATE WORLD a safe, wholesome place where your families can enjoy themselves and be entertained. In keeping with that aim, we invite your comments and guidance and would be pleased for you to bring to our attention any suggestions to make SKATE WORLD a better place for our young people.

Bernie buys land for gas plant system

BERNIE — The City Council decided this week to purchase 20 acres of land along Bowman Road from O. F. Russell on which the city will build a gas peak shaving plant system.

The council decided last week to exercise its option on 10 acres of ground, and decided Monday night to exercise its option on a second 10-acre plot.

Price of the land is $2,500 per acre or a total of $50,000 for the land.

The plant will be placed on a section about 300 feet square on the southeast corner of the first 5-acre plot.

Method of payment, whether it will be one lump sum or paid for over a period of time, has not been determined.

The council had planned to place the plant on school property, but when the public protested, it changed its mind.

would assume that in the next five or 10 years we are going to see some industrial growth in Sikeston.

The new power plant will be using southern Illinois coal which is generally high sulfur. Will this cause any pollution problems in Sikeston?

No. The plant will be designed to meet all state and federal environmental regulations. We will install scrubbers on the plant. The scrubbers take out the sulfuric oxide and cleanup the emissions.

Will there be any problem in selling the bonds?

No. At least, we were told by the bond people that because of our good record in the past of paying off bond issues, there would be no problem.

I-SC school board opposes Amendment 2

SCOTT CITY — The Illmo-Scott City R-1 school board Monday night went on record opposing the passage of Amdnement Two in the Nov. 2 General Election and urged all members to work for the defeat of the amendment.

The board said if approved, Amendment Two, which would remove the sales tax from food and drugs would result in a loss of $140 million a year in tax revenues to the State of Missouri and $40 million a year in tax revenues to cities and bus systems levying a local sales tax.

Amendment Two makes no provisions for replacing these lost revenues, thus raising the threat of much higher income of sales taxes well as substantially curtailed government services.

The revised budget for the 1976-1977 school year, with anticipated expenditures and receipts for the year in the amount of $1,333,000, was discussed and approved.

Mrs. Mary Ann Weisenborn, lunchroom supervisor, reported to the board concerning Government commodities, cost and operation of the program to date and of a new procedure for tickets of those eating in the program.

Mrs. Weisenborn said the new procedure is designed to have a more accurate count of those eating in order to do away with shortage for loss servings.

Superintendent J.A. Holmes reported on the Governor's Conference on Education, which is designed to get lay people's ideas, as well as educators' ideas, concerning improvements and possibly changes in the Foundation Program to be recommended to the next legislature.

Holmes, also reported that the Commissioner of Education would conduct a workshop at New Madrid, Oct. 26 in which board members are invited to attend. The board agreed to be represented.

He also noted that the annual joint meeting of superintendents and school boards of the state would be conducted in Columbia Nov. 21, 22, and 23.

Holmes added that a workshop for board members, administrators and teachers would be conducted in Cape Girardeau Oct. 28, from 5:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

The board also authorized the Kiwanis Club to hold it's annual grade school tournament on Nov. 19, 20 and 21. Proceeds are used for underprivileged children in the area.

Tax revenue loss is meeting topic

DEXTER— Revenue from taxes, and their possible loss, was a main topic of discussion at a short meeting Tuesday night of the Board of Education.

Supt. Thurston Hill told the board that if the present assessment ratio in Stoddard County continues, it could cost the district about $44,000 in state aid per year.

Hill explained that the ratio, a percentage of the "real" evaluation of property, is set by the state tax commission and is used as the base on which taxes are paid and is part of the formula used by the state in distributing state aid to school districts.

According to the state tax commission, Stoddard County had a tax assessment ratio of 28.5 pr cent in 1975, but was ordered last year to reduce it to 13.2 per cent, Hill said.

This lower figure is then used to compute the amount of taxes paid and how much state aid a district is entitled to receive.

Much of the discussion by the board was how to get around this difficulty-- which Hill said all districts face -- but could come up with no solution.

The board also expressed opposition to Amendment Two which would remove sales tax on food and drugs. The amendment will be voted on in the Nov. 2 election.

Hill said if approved, the amendment would cost the district about $157,000 per year in lost tax revenue, and that it would take a $1.60 increase in the local property tax rate to offset the loss.

In other business, the board instructed Hill to secure bids for two school buses for the 1977-78 school year, and Hill reported an increase in enrollment in the district.

He said that there were a total of 2,296 students enrolled in the district at the end of the first month of school, 59 more than at the same time last year.

This is at a time when other districts in the country have decreasing enrollment.

Hill said that for the last five years the Dexter school enrollment have been increasing about 50 per year, and is due almost entirely to population growth in the area.

The local tavern has just concocted a moon shot: near-vacuum in the glass.

Priorities are discussed

Charleston city council holds public hearing on community development

CHARLESTON — Citizens petitions were approved, bids for two new police cars were accepted and a public hearing on the 1977-78 community development priorities was held Tuesday night during the regular session of the City Council.

During the discussion on Community development priorities, it was pointed out that a portion of the $1 million expected for next year's program is committed to acquisition of property along E. Marshall St. for widening and installation of sanitary and storm sewers.

Edward Graham, a member of the board of directors for the Mississippi County Child Development Center, requested that the council again include the center in the coming year's C.D. program. He told the group that the center, which has been in operation two years, averages 35 children per day, 75 per cent of them from Charleston.

Graham also requested that the council, which has final approval over all C.D. projects, increase this year's donation to $1,800 from the previous $1,500 donation so that employes of the center can be given a salary increase.

A community buuilding was another topic of discussion for C.D. funds. It was noted that residents expressed their approval for the building's construction during a popular opinion poll taken in the Aug. 3 primary election.

It was pointed out that the next year's program would be the only feasible year for construction of the centersince the following year's funds is expected to be only $600,000, decreasing to $400,000 for next year.

Another hearing on C.D. priorities is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. tonight in the council chambers at City Hall.

In other action, the council approved a petition from downtown merchants presented by Frank Bihr, to re-install parking meters on Commercial and Market streets, along one block east and west of Main Street.

Since the removal of the meters last month, Bihr, said downtown employes had been parking their cars along the street, creating a shortage of parking places for shoppers.

The council passed a motion to increase parking fines from 25 cents to 50 cents for the first violation. If not paid within 24 hours, the fine will be raised to one dollar.

A petition presented by an attorney, requesting the removal of one panel in the wrought iron railing on the west side of N. Main Street between the offices of Dr. Wilbur L. Davis and Dr. Gregorio Rodriguez was approved.

The petition had also requested a limited or emergency parking only zone be designated in front of the doctors' offices for the convenience of incapacitated patients being transported to and from the office by ambulance and private cars.

A study of the parking request will be made by City Manager Willis Downs before council action is taken.

The council accepted a bid of $9,175, including trade-in of two cars, 1964 and 1966 models, from Ponder Chevrolet-Buick Co. for two intermediate size police cars.

The other bid submitted was for $9,750, less trade-in, from Courtesy Ford Co.

Police Chief Bob Ritchey was authorized to purchase three citizens band radios for installation in police cars.

A public hearing will be held Nov. 9 in conjunction with the council meeting to discuss amending regulations of the Home Occupation Ordinance. The recommendation for changes was made by the planning and zoning commission.

Troy' suspicions continue to grow

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is a segment of a novel, "Sticks and Stones May Break Your Bones," by Cherie Blanton. The installments appear in the paper each Wednesday.

SUMMARY

Amos and Jo hear a shot in the woods and upon investigation it turns out that someone has stolen Amos' gun and taken a shot at Luke. Startled, Luke has fallen and hit his head on a rock rendering himself unconscious. When he is found, Sidney, who is with the search party, gasps and seems to suffer a slight heart attack.

Sheriff Ames arrives and has Luke and Sidney taken to the hospital. He then goes over the facts of the case with Amos and Troy, who is pretty sure Sidney knows more than he is telling about all the mysterious happenings at "Rainbow's End."

Stacy entered the living room and was confronted by four pairs of questioning eyes. She looked at all of them and then shook her head slowly from side to side.

"I don't know," she burst out, "I just don't know." She crossed to the fireplace and slowly sat down in one of the wing chairs flanking it.

"Jud came straight to the hospital after you called him Troy, and when he got there he ran me out of Sidney's room so he could talk with him in private."

She rubbed her ring nervously. "I don't know what it was they discussed, but after Jud left,. Sidney had to be sedated he was so upset."

To anyone looking a sudden gleam could be detected beginning to glow in Troy's eyes. I knew there was something about all this business that Sidney is aware of she thought, and I'll bet my bottom dollar it's got something to do with Jud. Why, I wouldn't put anything past him.

Stacy was continuing, "Anyway, after he calmed down and fell asleep, I left his room and went to see if there had been any change in Luke."

"And had there?" asked Jo.

"No," tears came to her eyes, "oh dear God, he looks so young and vulnerable lying there with his face so white and that bandage wrapped round his skull like a mummy. It tore my heart out looking at him."

"What did the doctor say about his chances?" Louise queried.

"He simply doesn't know." Stacy told her, "first thing he has to do is to recover consciousness, and so far he's shown no signs of doing that at all." She paused and frowned. "Then, if he does awaken, only then will they know to what extent his brain might have been damaged."

"You mean," Joe asked grimly, "it might be better if he never woke up?"

"Yes," she answered, "if he hit his head so hard he injured his brain, it might prove best if he didn't."

"Oh no," and Sam begin weeping softly.

"Now stop it," Troy demanded angrily, "you're all giving up on the boy before you know just how badly he's hurt. He's young, and strong, and he has our prayers. I won't believe he's not going to get well." She rose and begin pacing the floor of the room. "Some vacation Louise, I bet you'll think twice before you accept another invitation from me," she added bitterly.

"None of this has been your fault," she reassured Troy, "staying home playing the piano or babysitting with someone's wild brood of brats is infinitely worse than this." She rose also. "Today's excitement has won me out — if none of you mind, I think Ill go upstairs to bed."

"That sounds like a fine idea to me," responded Jo, "many more days like these last few have been, and I'm going to have to crawl into the bed next to Sidney, and let them sedate me too."

"No don't," Sam smiled tearfully at her, "we all rely too much on you." Rising, she left the room with Jo and Louise.

"Are you coming along too?" asked Stacy.

"Not yet," Troy answered, "I think I'll sit down here for awhile and think."

She sat there long after everyone had gone to bed and tried to collect her thoughts which seemed to be milling about in her head like hornets do around their nest. If I could just get this all sorted out and into some sort of pattern, she mused, surely I could make some sense of it.

Getting to her feet she walked over to a small desk standing in a corner of the living room, and sitting down she rumaged in a drawer for paper and pen. They always told me in school when my mind got to whirling too fast, that if I would make a list of things it would help, and at this stage I'll try anything. Bending over, she began writing down the series of events that had led up to this afternoon.

1. Sidney and Stacy collide
2. Sidney starts courting Stacy
3. Jo hires Randy Weaks
4. The cattle fences are broken down
5. The tobacco barn catches fire
6. Stacy and Sidney announce their engagement
7. Jo wires me to come home
8. Louise and I arrive and some calves are killed
9. I'm chased by a ghost in the conversatory
10. Old Annie falls and kills herself

Here she paused as a wave of sorrow enveloped her. So many bad things had happened in so few days it was almost more than one could bear.

11. Talk to Luke at funeral and discover he has plans mapped out for his future
12. Wires are cut, an intruder enters and Ta is injured

Again she stopped writing and sitting up listened — was that a door she'd heard being shut somewhere in the back of the house — she remained quiet still. Nonsense, her nerves were getting the best of her, first running from pigs and now jumping at small noises. If anything at all, it was probably only one of the girls upstairs going to the bathroom, and again she picked up her pen.

13. Amos gun is stolen, and Luke found unconscious
14. Sidney suffers a heart attack when confronted with the boy
15. Jud goes to the hospital and upsets Sidney enough he has to be sedated

There, she sat back in her chair and read over her notes. No matter how you looked at it, Sidney's name kept cropping up in her list, and as Amos pointed out — none of this started until he had begun to call on her sister.

Could Sidney be the villain in this piece? No, Troy shook her head, not Sidney, he'd never been anything but a weak pawn of Jud's all his life, but that Jud was a tyrant. What was that he'd said to Jo — he would have this land, even if it was over her dead body? Troy gasped, was he really so crazy he'd go to such extremes?

Her heart beating fast, she sat trying to compose herself. Somehow it wasn't hard to imagine Jud in the role of fence breaker, barn burner, and cattle killer, but would he be so determined to have their farm that he'd resort to murder? And anyway, what good would the murder of a boy like Luke do him — that wouldn't help him to get his hands on this land — and who had broken into the house — she was sure neither Jud, nor Sidney with his weak heart, had been spry enough to shinny up that old tree to gain entry into their home.

She picked up her list and again started reading over it. Of course, she hit her head with the palm of her hand — Randy Weaks, — he had to be the intruder. Then, she sat back as still another idea flitted across her mind — unless it had been Luke who had crawled through that window. Could Jud have hired Luke to help him scare the women into selling — is that why the boy had his plans all set for a new life?

Her brow knitted as a sick feeling engulfed her. Dear God, she silently prayed, don't let it be Luke. I'm too fond of him and it would have broken Annie's heart if she had thought he might be involved in something like this. And then a new and an even more horrible suspicion crossed her mind — what if Annie had found out — what if she hadn't accidentaly fallen.

Michael had felt like there was something odd about the death. And now Troy could sit still no longer. The pain in her chest was growing unbearable. I believe I've figured it all out, she thought, it's so simple really, and sighing she reached for another piece of paper. I'll write it all down and show it to Michael tomorrow, she decided, he can handle it from there. Suddenly she felt her age and older, and slowly picking up the pen she again begin to write.

1. Jud puts Sidney up to marrying Stacy in order to get close to Jo and get the farm
2. Jud hires Luke to help him frighten us into selling the place

That would be the way Jud would think. He would feel as though we would be keeping it all in the family anyway, and that would override all our former objections.

3. Annie discovers this after I go and talk to her, and either Jud or Luke kill her when she threatens to expose them

It must have been Jud, she thought, I don't believe Luke would hurt his Granny for any reason, he loved her too much.

4. Luke has to kick Ta when he enters the house that night before the dog recognizes him

Then she shook her head, would Luke deliberately harm the dog as much as he loves animals? Who knows — and anyway, what do I really know about him — only that he's Annie's grandson and that doesn't necessarily mean he couldn't be bad.

5. Luke finds out Jud killed his Granny and so tries to threaten Jud and blackmail him for more money, and Jud tried to kill him

She dropped her pen, utterly exhausted. There, the whole sordid mess is explained. Why was I so stupid and slow and never saw any of this before, and she felt the beginnings of a torturing headache come on her.

I wonder where they got that old uniform, crossed her mind, as she stood to go and get Ta for his bedtime walk. Do you think Luke could have slipped in the attic and taken Granddaddy's? She knew at different times Jo had hired him to help Bertha around the house, with jobs that were too hard and heavy for she and Stacy to manage.

I'm going to ask Stacy where that is and go and look for it tomorrow, and she called to the poodle who came limping out from behind a chair. Leaving the papers lying on the desk, she and the little dog went outdoors.

"Troy -- Troy -- wake up -- I need you." As her eyes slowly opened she recognized Jo bending over her bed.

"What time is it?" asked Troy bewildered, "What on earth?" For she could see Amos standing outside the door to her room.

"Hush," Joe warned, a finger to her lips, "throw on your housecoast and come downstairs. Something terrible has happened."

Not something more, thought Troy as she hastily slipped on a robe and thrust her feet into some houseshoes.

As soon as they were downstairs, where the sound of their voices wouldn't awaken the others, Jo began, "Amos heard a commotion in the hog lot while ago, and when he got up and went to see what the matter was --" Here she paused, seemingly unable to continue.

"Is it Sadie?" asked Troy, worried lest her friends pet was harmed.

Amos shook his head, "Thank goodness, Sadie's in the cabin with us cause Bertha been afraid something might happen to her, all the badness been goin on. No, it warn't Bertha's pig."

He looked for a chair and sinking slowly into it continued, "I went out there and I could see them old sows milling and poking about at something on the ground in their pen."

He paused and took a deep breath, "Miss Troy, it was Mr. Jud in that pen." She gasped and he went on, "He were dead — and them nasty animals," he gave a shudder, "I had my gun with me and I used the butt to knock them away so's I could drag him out, but he sure ain't no sight for anyone to see." He looked up as Jo entered with almost a full tumbler of whiskey.

"Here Amos, I think you better drink all of this down before you faint."

"I ain't never fainted before Miss Jo." He looked at her, his eyes filling with tears, "Mr. Jud weren't no friend of mine, fact of the truth is, I didn't even like him none — but no one should die like that." And with trembling hands he tilted the glass and drained the contents.

"What on earth would he be doing in the hog lot?" asked a bemused Troy, "and why couldn't he get out?"

"The back of his head all bashed in and bloodied." Amos answered, "I don't think them pigs did that, but I spect that smell of blood was what got them so riled up."

"I don't understand any of this," Jo said equally baffled, "but Troy, — he was wearing an old Confederate uniform — Jud was your ghost!!"

"I know," Troy nodded, "I sat down here at this desk tonight, and I think I figured the whole mystery out." She shook her head grimly, "And if I'm right Amos, don't let his dying upset you too much — he deserved just what he got — pigs and all!"

"Have you called Michael?"

"No," Jo shook her head, "neither of us was thinking too straight. Amos came for me and I went for you. Lord, I think I could use a drink too."

"Get us all one." Troy pointed to Amos' empty glass, "I'm going to get poor Michael out of bed once more."

Mrs. Carter's recipe in Atlanta cookbook

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Amid the reams of publicity circulating about Jimmy Carter and family was an item that caught my eye. Apparently the Democratic nominee's wife, Rosalynn, is quite a cook.

It seems that when Carter was governor of Georgia, an organization known as the Junior Associates of the Atlanta Music Club came out with a collection of local residents' recipes titled "Atlanta Cooks for Company" (Atlanta Music Club, P.O. Box 52572, Atlanta, Ga. 30305).

The book was so well received that it was designated the official cookbook of Atlanta. Since it first appeared in October 1968, more than 75,000 copies have been sold and the book is going into its seventh printing. Proceeds from the book go to philanthropic causes related to music, such as scholarships for talented young musicians.

Mrs. Carter's contribution, which appears on page 141, is called the "Plains Special" Cheese Ring. The Carters reportedly served it when they entertained at the gubernatorial mansion.

The recipe combines chopped nuts (peanuts naturally!) and cheese, along with mayonnaise, grated onion, black pepper and cayenne.

The book has a number of interesting offerings for brunch, the noonday meal, tea, cocktail parties, dinners and holiday feasts.

Teatime in Atlanta must be an occasion, judging from the recipes which call for such dishes as chicken and almond sandwiches, caviar and hard-boiled egg on toast and Rosalynn Carter's hearty cheese ring.

Here's the Carter recipe:

1 pound grated sharp cheddar cheese
1 cup chopped peanuts
1 cup mayonnaise
1 small onion, grated
Black pepper to taste
Dash of cayenne

Mold all ingredients with hands into desired shape, place in refrigerator and chill. When ready to serve, fill center with strawberry preserves. But it is also good as a cheese spread without preserves.

Troy' suspicions continue to grow

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is a segment of a novel, "Sticks and Stones May Break Your Bones," by Cherie Blanton. The installments appear in the paper each Wednesday.

SUMMARY

Amos and Jo hear a shot in the woods and upon investigation it turns out that someone has stolen Amos' gun and taken a shot at Luke. Startled, Luke has fallen and hit his head on a rock rendering himself unconscious. When he is found, Sidney, who is with the search party, gasps and seems to suffer a slight heart attack.

Sheriff Ames arrives and has Luke and Sidney taken to the hospital. He then goes over the facts of the case with Amos and Troy, who is pretty sure Sidney knows more than he is telling about all the mysterious happenings at "Rainbow's End."

Stacy entered the living room and was confronted by four pairs of questioning eyes. She looked at all of them and then shook her head slowly from side to side.

"I don't know," she burst out, "I just don't know." She crossed to the fireplace and slowly sat down in one of the wing chairs flanking it.

"Jud came straight to the hospital after you called him Troy, and when he got there he ran me out of Sidney's room so he could talk with him in private."

She rubbed her ring nervously. "I don't know what it was they discussed, but after Jud left, Sidney had to be sedated he was so upset."

To anyone looking a sudden gleam could be detected beginning to glow in Troy's eyes. I knew there was something about all this business that Sidney is aware of she thought, and I'll bet my bottom dollar it's got something to do with Jud. Why, I wouldn't put anything past him.

Stacy was continuing, "Anyway, after he calmed down and fell asleep, I left his room and went to see if there had been any change in Luke."

"And had there?" asked Jo.

"No," tears came to her eyes, "oh dear God, he looks so young and vulnerable lying there with his face so white and that bandage wrapped round his skull like a mummy. It tore my heart out looking at him."

"What did the doctor say about his chances?" Louise queried.

"He simply doesn't know." Stacy told her, "first thing he has to do is to recover consciousness, and so far he's shown no signs of doing that at all." She paused and frowned. "Then, if he does awaken, only then will they know to what extent his brain might have been damaged."

"You mean," Joe asked grimly, "it might be better if he never woke up?"

"Yes," she answered, "if he hit his head so hard he injured his brain, it might prove best if he didn't."

"Oh no," and Sam begin weeping softly.

"Now stop it," Troy demanded angrily, "you're all giving up on the boy before you know just how badly he's hurt. He's young, and strong, and he has our prayers. I won't believe he's not going to get well." She rose and begin pacing the floor of the room. "Some vacation Louise, I bet you'll think twice before you accept another invitation from me," she added bitterly.

"None of this has been your fault," she reassured Troy, "staying home playing the piano or babysitting with someone's wild brood of brats is infinitely worse than this." She rose also. "Today's excitement has won me out — if none of you mind, I think Ill go upstairs to bed."

"That sounds like a fine idea to me," responded Jo, "many more days like these last few have been, and I'm going to have to crawl into the bed next to Sidney, and let them sedate me too."

"No don't," Sam smiled tearfully at her, "we all rely too much on you." Rising, she left the room with Jo and Louise.

"Are you coming along too?" asked Stacy.

"Not yet," Troy answered, "I think I'll sit down here for awhile and think."

She sat there long after everyone had gone to bed and tried to collect her thoughts which seemed to be milling about in her head like hornets do around their nest. If I could just get this all sorted out and into some sort of pattern, she mused, surely I could make some sense of it.

Getting to her feet she walked over to a small desk standing in a corner of the living room, and sitting down she rumaged in a drawer for paper and pen. They always told me in school when my mind got to whirling too fast, that if I would make a list of things it would help, and at this stage I'll try anything. Bending over, she began writing down the series of events that had led up to this afternoon.

1. Sidney and Stacy collide
2. Sidney starts courting Stacy
3. Jo hires Randy Weaks
4. The cattle fences are broken down
5. The tobacco barn catches fire
6. Stacy and Sidney announce their engagement
7. Jo wires me to come home
8. Louise and I arrive and some calves are killed
9. I'm chased by a ghost in the conversatory
10. Old Annie falls and kills herself

Here she paused as a wave of sorrow enveloped her. So many bad things had happened in so few days it was almost more than one could bear.

11. Talk to Luke at funeral and discover he has plans mapped out for his future
12. Wires are cut, an intruder enters and Ta is injured

Again she stopped writing and sitting up listened — was that a door she'd heard being shut somewhere in the back of the house — she remained quiet still. Nonsense, her nerves were getting the best of her, first running from pigs and now jumping at small noises. If anything at all, it was probably only one of the girls upstairs going to the bathroom, and again she picked up her pen.

13. Amos gun is stolen, and Luke found unconscious
14. Sidney suffers a heart attack when confronted with the boy
15. Jud goes to the hospital and upsets Sidney enough he has to be sedated

There, she sat back in her chair and read over her notes. No matter how you looked at it, Sidney's name kept cropping up in her list, and as Amos pointed out — none of this started until he had begun to call on her sister.

Could Sidney be the villain in this piece? No, Troy shook her head, not Sidney, he'd never been anything but a weak pawn of Jud's all his life, but that Jud was a tyrant. What was that he'd said to Jo — he would have this land, even if it was over her dead body? Troy gasped, was he really so crazy he'd go to such extremes?

Her heart beating fast, she sat trying to compose herself. Somehow it wasn't hard to imagine Jud in the role of fence breaker, barn burner, and cattle killer, but would he be so determined to have their farm that he'd resort to murder? And anyway, what good would the murder of a boy like Luke do him — that wouldn't help him to get his hands on this land — and who had broken into the house — she was sure neither Jud, nor Sidney with his weak heart, had been spry enough to shinny up that old tree to gain entry into their home.

She picked up her list and again started reading over it. Of course, she hit her head with the palm of her hand — Randy Weaks, — he had to be the intruder. Then, she sat back as still another idea flitted across her mind — unless it had been Luke who had crawled through that window. Her brow knitted as a sick feeling engulfed her. Dear God, she silently prayed, don't let it be Luke. I wonder where they got that old uniform, crossed her mind, as she stood to go and get Ta for his bedtime walk. Do you think Luke could have slipped in the attic and taken Granddaddy's? She knew at different times Jo had hired him to help Bertha around the house, with jobs that were too hard and heavy for she and Stacy to manage.

"Here Amos, I think you better drink all of this down before you faint."

Kirkpatrick has had dual careers in life

Missouri's veteran Secretary of State, James C. Kirkpatrick, has had dual careers in journalism and public service.

He has served as Secretary of State since 1965. Highlights of his administration include reform of Missouri's election laws, establishment of Uniform Commercial Code service, inauguration of the state's first Records Management and Archives service (which has saved taxpayers more than $4 million), a new securities law to better protect Missouri investors, modernization of the state's Official Manual and computerization to provide improved service for the citizens of Missouri.

Secretary Kirkpatrick is nationally recognized as an authority on election administration and records management. He is a past-president of the National Association of Secretaries of State. In 1975, he was appointed to a two-year term as a member of the Advisory Panel of the Federal Elections Commission in Washington, D.C., dealing with the problems of voter registration and election administration.

He is a former editor of the Warrensburg STAR-JOURNAL and the Jefferson City NEWS-TRIBUNE. For 18 years he was publisher together with his son, Don, of the Windsor REVIEW and, from 1972 to 1974, they published the Lamar DAILY-DEMOCRAT.

The Secretary is a past-president of the Missouri Press Association, Central Missouri Press Association and Democratic Editors of Missouri.

The Secretary served as a member of Central Missouri State University Board of Regents for 12 years, 10 of those years as chairman. He was honored with the distinguished alumni award from Central Missouri State in 1971.

The University of Missouri School of Journalism which he attended awarded him their medal for distinguished service to journalism in 1969. The University also presented him the Faculty- Alumni Award in 1972.

Kirkpatrick is a member of the Missouri Academy of Squires, an organization unique among the states, whose membership is limited to 100 outstanding Missourians.

In 1968, he was awarded the Scroll of Honor from the Missouri Good Roads and Streets Association. In 1969, the Missouri State Highway Department cited him as one of six Missourians outstanding in their dedication to highway building in modern times.

In 1970, his fraternity, Sigma Tau Gamma, recognized him as one of the nation's top Taus. Fraternity honors came again in 1974, when Sigma Tau Gamma presented Secretary Kirkpatrick their Distinguished Achievement Award.

As the state's top ranking Democratic official, he currently serves as a member of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

Republicans respond to criticism

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — In response to Democratic criticism of Gov. Christopher S. Bond's performance during the past four years, state Republicans have issued their own critical report of Bond's Democratic opponent, Joseph Teasdale.

The 18-page statement by GOP state party chairman Lowell McCuskey, says Teasdale "was an ineffective prosecutor" while he was Jackson County prosecuting attorney from 1966 to 1972.

"A substantial record exists tonsupport the view that he failed to devote his full time and attention to the position," the report said. Like the 75-page study on Bond by the Democrats, the Republican treatise on Teasdale is based on newspaper stories.

The newspaper stories cited by the Republican report dealt with criticism by the Jackson County sheriff's office and the Independence Crime Commission, which said Teasdale was spending too much time away from his office campaign for governor.

The report also said Teasdale is not a legislative leader since few of the bills he lobbied for gained passage in the 1969 session of the General Assembly.

"Unlike Gov. Bond, Joe Teasdale has not had an impeccable record on campaign financing," the report said.

High school dropout wins instant lottery

NEW YORK (AP) — A year and a half ago, Robert Netto dropped out of high school to pump gas in Watertown, N.Y. Now the 19-year-old has become a millionaire as New York State' first $1 million instant lottery winner.

"I was content with him just as he was, a gas station attendant," his 18-year-old wife, Judy, said Monday night as she helped him on stage to accept the first $1,000 of his reward.

He can look forward to receiving that much every week for the rest of his life, and lottery officials estimate that, at his age, Netto could live to collect $4 million from the $1 lottery ticket he bought at the station where he works.

Netto said he's not going to quit that $60-a-week job, at least not right away.

"My biggest dream has always been to win $1,000," he said. "I'd like to own a gas station someday. Now maybe I'll own a line of them."

"This was it, this did it," she screamed from the stage, still clutching a 4-inch tall plastic statue of the infant Jesus, which she said she had been holding all day. It was given to her by her mother-in-law before the couple drove to Manhattan on Sunday for the final award program.

Netto said he will give his mother a house and will donate $5,000 of his winnings to the Roman Catholic Church.

"I was sitting there praying, and I said, 'If I win, I'll give $5,000 to the church,'" Netto added.

Netto also plans to take a trip now that he is a millionaire. He and his wife will go to Kansas, he said, because, "I've been there before and I like it."

Iowa adults are going back to college

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — More adults are going back to college these days — both to complete degrees and to take refresher courses. Colleges, faced with dropping birth rates and consequently lower enrollments, are encouraging the trend.

"If we are going to maintain our facilities, we're going to have to encourage other students," said Dr. Joseph Fisher, director of Drake University's Reading and Study Skills Clinic. "This leaves adults wide open."

Iowa's state universities have reversed the trends of recent years and for the second year in a row are seeing increased enrollments. Officials attribute the increases to more dropouts returning to school and fewer juniors and seniors leaving school before graduation.

To make it easier for adults long out of school to attend Drake, a private college, Fisher recently taught a one-week evening course called "Back to School — Survival Skills," for entering students

"We had to turn people away," Fisher said. He expects the course to become standard.

Fisher said mature people who have been out of school for years have psychological and academic problems that other students don't have.

"The initial one they have is a fear of failure," Fisher said. "They frequently are afraid they can't learn any more because of their age."

"They don't have systematic methods of going about studying," Fisher said. "They have to learn to be a bit more demanding of themselves and improve their reading rate, especially learning to skim."

Dr. Philip Langerman, dean of the College for Continuing Education at Drake, said about 30 per cent of Drake students taking courses for college credit are adults coming back to college part-time.

"It's closer to 60 per cent if you include noncredit activities," he said.

That is an increase of about 30 per cent in the past five years of part-time students attending college for credit and double the number of students taking noncredit courses.

Fisher said that much of the increase is due to minority groups and women's liberation organizations encouraging their members to return to college.

"They recognize that if their members are going to get ahead, they're going to have to be qualified to do different things," he said.

Kirkpatrick has had dual careers in life

Missouri's veteran Secretary of State, James C. Kirkpatrick, has had dual careers in journalism and public service.

He has served as Secretary of State since 1965. Highlights of his administration include reform of Missouri's election laws, establishment of Uniform Commercial Code service, inauguration of the state's first Records Management and Archives service (which has saved taxpayers more than $4 million), a new securities law to better protect Missouri investors, modernization of the state's Official Manual and computerization to provide improved service for the citizens of Missouri.

Secretary Kirkpatrick is nationally recognized as an authority on election administration and records management. He is a past-president of the National Association of Secretaries of State. In 1975, he was appointed to a two-year term as a member of the Advisory Panel of the Federal Elections Commission in Washington, D.C., dealing with the problems of voter registration and election administration.

He is a former editor of the Warrensburg STAR-JOURNAL and the Jefferson City NEWS-TRIBUNE. For 18 years he was publisher together with his son, Don, of the Windsor REVIEW and, from 1972 to 1974, they published the Lamar DAILY-DEMOCRAT.

The Secretary is a past-president of the Missouri Press Association, Central Missouri Press Association and Democratic Editors of Missouri.

The Secretary served as a member of Central Missouri State University Board of Regents for 12 years, 10 of those years as chairman. He was honored with the distinguished alumni award from Central Missouri State in 1971.

The University of Missouri School of Journalism which he attended awarded him their medal for distinguished service to journalism in 1969. The University also presented him the Faculty- Alumni Award in 1972.

Kirkpatrick is a member of the Missouri Academy of Squires, an organization unique among the states, whose membership is limited to 100 outstanding Missourians.

In 1968, he was awarded the Scroll of Honor from the Missouri Good Roads and Streets Association. In 1969, the Missouri State Highway Department cited him as one of six Missourians outstanding in their dedication to highway building in modern times.

In 1970, his fraternity, Sigma Tau Gamma, recognized him as one of the nation's top Taus. Fraternity honors came again in 1974, when Sigma Tau Gamma presented Secretary Kirkpatrick their Distinguished Achievement Award.

Republicans respond to criticism

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — In response to Democratic criticism of Gov. Christopher S. Bond's performance during the past four years, state Republicans have issued their own critical report of Bond's Democratic opponent, Joseph Teasdale.

The 18-page statement by GOP state party chairman Lowell McCuskey, says Teasdale "was an ineffective prosecutor" while he was Jackson County prosecuting attorney from 1966 to 1972.

"A substantial record exists tonsupport the view that he failed to devote his full time and attention to the position," the report said. Like the 75-page study on Bond by the Democrats, the Republican treatise on Teasdale is based on newspaper stories.

The newspaper stories cited by the Republican report dealt with criticism by the Jackson County sheriff's office and the Independence Crime Commission, which said Teasdale was spending too much time away from his office campaign for governor.

The report also said Teasdale is not a legislative leader since few of the bills he lobbied for gained passage in the 1969 session of the General Assembly.

"Unlike Gov. Bond, Joe Teasdale has not had an impeccable record on campaign financing," the report said.

High school dropout wins instant lottery

NEW YORK (AP) — A year and a half ago, Robert Netto dropped out of high school to pump gas in Watertown, N.Y. Now the 19-year-old has become a millionaire as New York State' first $1 million instant lottery winner.

"I was content with him just as he was, a gas station attendant," his 18-year-old wife, Judy, said Monday night as she helped him on stage to accept the first $1,000 of his reward.

He can look forward to receiving that much every week for the rest of his life, and lottery officials estimate that, at his age, Netto could live to collect $4 million from the $1 lottery ticket he bought at the station where he works.

Netto said he's not going to quit that $60-a-week job, at least not right away.

"My biggest dream has always been to win $1,000," he said. "I'd like to own a gas station someday. Now maybe I'll own a line of them."

His wife of 4½ months didn't think twice before announcing that she will quit her $60-a-week job as a department store cashier.

"This was it, this did it," she screamed from the stage, still clutching a 4-inch tall plastic statue of the infant Jesus, which she said she had been holding all day. It was given to her by her mother-in-law before the couple drove to Manhattan on Sunday for the final award program.

Netto said he will give his mother a house and will donate $5,000 of his winnings to the Roman Catholic Church.

"I was sitting there praying, and I said, 'If I win, I'll give $5,000 to the church,'" Netto added.

Netto also plans to take a trip now that he is a millionaire. He and his wife will go to Kansas, he said, because, "I've been there before and I like it."

Iowa adults are going back to college

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — More adults are going back to college these days — both to complete degrees and to take refresher courses. Colleges, faced with dropping birth rates and consequently lower enrollments, are encouraging the trend.

"If we are going to maintain our facilities, we're going to have to encourage other students," said Dr. Joseph Fisher, director of Drake University's Reading and Study Skills Clinic. "This leaves adults wide open."

Iowa's state universities have reversed the trends of recent years and for the second year in a row are seeing increased enrollments. Officials attribute the increases to more dropouts returning to school and fewer juniors and seniors leaving school before graduation.

To make it easier for adults long out of school to attend Drake, a private college, Fisher recently taught a one-week evening course called "Back to School — Survival Skills," for entering students

"We had to turn people away," Fisher said. He expects the course to become standard.

Fisher said mature people who have been out of school for years have psychological and academic problems that other students don't have.

"The initial one they have is a fear of failure," Fisher said. "They frequently are afraid they can't learn any more because of their age."

Other problems include unrealistic expectations of capabilities, fixed attitudes and difficulty rearranging life schedules, particularly by housewives who must study while caring for children.

"They don't have systematic methods of going about studying," Fisher said. "They have to learn to be a bit more demanding of themselves and improve their reading rate, especially learning to skim."

Dr. Philip Langerman, dean of the College for Continuing Education at Drake, said about 30 per cent of Drake students taking courses for college credit are adults coming back to college part-time.

"It's closer to 60 per cent if you include noncredit activities," he said.

That is an increase of about 30 per cent in the past five years of part-time students attending college for credit and double the number of students taking noncredit courses.

Fisher said that much of the increase is due to minority groups and women's liberation organizations encouraging their members to return to college.

"They recognize that if their members are going to get ahead, they're going to have to be qualified to do different things," he said.

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The kind of merchandise being offered at home tag sales was once given away to worthy organizations, observed William D. Harwood. He was, until recently, president of Goodwill Industries of Western Connecticut.

"The average home tag sale may make about $200 in a day, a spot check has shown, selling the kinds of things organizations used to get. Now Goodwill is asking for the leftovers of the tag sales, which it can sell by moving them to a broader population than one might get at a neighborhood sale," Harwood said.

The organization has had to find new ways to build sales. They have even rented tables at flea markets, tag sales and antique shows to sell their merchandise on occasion, he said.

There are 157 Goodwill Industries in the United States. A vocational rehabilitation agency, it serves persons who are physically handicapped, mentally retarded and emotionally disturbed, using the income in many ways. Sixty per cent of it might go to the handicapped who work in the industry. In Connecticut the remainder is used for such things as operating expenses, work adjustment programs, human service programs and the like that are a part supported by the State Department of Vocational Rehabilitation.

Salable things that are needed but do not come their way include clothing, especially children's, for which they've always had a big market, and shoes, pots and pans, as well as the toasters, irons and other things that might be recycled.

RECYCLING—This toaster in need of minor repairs gets a new lease on life at Goodwill Industries of Western Connecticut.

Small appliances, jewelry and books are also in short supply these days.

"Those are the kinds of things people would give away so it has had its effect on the volume of material available because the things are sold easily — everybody has an interest in them," Harwood said.

The effect on sales has been significant since most of Goodwill's income comes from sales in its retail stores, which are a supporting arm of the agency. As a result, they've reprogrammed their sales displays and rearranged the floor structure in shops. They have tried to find out which items are popular in each store — because some stores need more clothing than others.

Although many people complain that they can't get organizations to pick up their contributions, Goodwill has collection centers placed in convenient sections of towns because it is the most economical way for them to pick up small items. Many agencies are not equipped to pick up big sofas or refrigerators. There is no market for certain refrigerators and they are cumbersome to handle. As for sofas, they are often unusable unless they are in good shape.

"When a sofa is offered, the contributor is asked whether it can be sold in its present condition. If so, it is picked up. Some items, such as pianos, are too difficult to handle. Most helpers on trucks are handicapped with disabilities that might be aggravated by such jobs," Harwood explained.

On the other hand, many Goodwills have upholstery shops and can repair sofas, even battered ones. In the Connecticut area they repair furniture and toasters and make minor repairs to lawnmowers and the like. Major repair work was given up mainly because the total cost had gotten completely out of hand, he said.

"For example, a lot of imported and mass manufactured furnishings do not stand up quality-wise. Much clothing made overseas is not as sturdy as our used American clothing and major repairs are often too time-consuming."

In the radio and television shop where five handicapped people work it has been found practical to repair only table televisions. People don't buy old consoles so Goodwill must watch how much time is invested in them, Harwood noted.

Their response to the growth of tag sales has been to divide their products into three categories: there are antiques and near antiques. There is the regular Goodwill merchandise that the majority of shoppers is seeking — household wares, shoes and so on. There are the objects that are called "as is" — items that need repair but have some marketable value — a metal outdoor chair that is rusty, "too good to throw away, but not too bad to fix up," so it can be sold as it is. Ditto pots and pans, a very popular category in the world of recycled household effects.

ST. LOUIS — Firms selected to supply more than $63 million in new freight cars and locomotives for the Missouri Pacific System have been announced. The purchase of equipment, one of the largest single orders ever placed by MoPac, consists of 1,300 freight cars and 50 locomotives.

Included in the orders are: Four hundred double-door boxcars of 100-ton capacity, to be built by ACF Industries at St. Louis; 350 covered hopper cars, of 100-ton capacity, of which 300 will be built by Pullman-Standard Co. at Butler, Pa., and 50 by General American Transportation Co., East Chicago, Ind.; 350 insulated boxcars, of 70-ton capacity, to be built by Pacific Car & Foundry Co., Renton, Wash.

Two hundred fixed-end gondola cars, of 100-ton capacity, to be built by Thrall Car Manufacturing Co. at Chicago; 40 diesel locomotives, of 1,500 horsepower to be built by the Electro-Motive Division of General Motors Corp. at LaGrange, Ill.; and 10 diesel locomotives, of 2,250 HP, to be built by General Electric Co. at Erie, Pa.

Delivery of this equipment will start in early 1977. Since 1961, when MoPac began an intensive plant modernization and equipment expansion program, the railroad has purchased 31,000 new freight cars, equal to more than half its freight car fleet, and 800 locomotives, about 75 per cent of its motive power fleet, at a cost of $750 million.

Tim was so learned that he could name a horse in nine languages. So ignorant that he bought a cow to ride on.

Jerry West spent all 14 years of his pro basketball playing career with the Los Angeles Lakers, was a National Basketball Assn. all-star choice 12 times, then signed a multi-year contract to coach the only NBA team for which he ever played.

Agency gives old items new life

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

RECYCLING—This toaster in need of minor repairs gets a new lease on life at Goodwill Industries of Western Connecticut.

The kind of merchandise being offered at home tag sales was once given away to worthy organizations, observed William D. Harwood. He was, until recently, president of Goodwill Industries of Western Connecticut.

"The average home tag sale may make about $200 in a day, a spot check has shown, selling the kinds of things organizations used to get. Now Goodwill is asking for the leftovers of the tag sales, which it can sell by moving them to a broader population than one might get at a neighborhood sale," Harwood said.

The organization has had to find new ways to build sales. They have even rented tables at flea markets, tag sales and antique shows to sell their merchandise on occasion, he said.

There are 157 Goodwill Industries in the United States. A vocational rehabilitation agency, it serves persons who are physically handicapped, mentally retarded and emotionally disturbed, using the income in many ways. Sixty per cent of it might go to the handicapped who work in the industry. In Connecticut the remainder is used for such things as operating expenses, work adjustment programs, human service programs and the like that are in part supported by the State Department of Vocational Rehabilitation.

Salable things that are needed but do not come their way include clothing, especially children's, for which they've always had a big market, and dishes, pots and pans, as well as the toasters, irons and other things that might be recycled.

Small appliances, jewelry and books are also in short supply these days.

"Those are the kinds of things people would give away so it has had its effect on the volume of material available because the things are sold easily — everybody has an interest in them," Harwood said.

The effect on sales has been significant since most of Goodwill's income comes from sales in its retail stores, which are a supporting arm of the agency. As a result, they've reprogrammed their sales displays and rearranged the floor structure in shops. They have tried to find out which items are popular in each store — because some stores need more clothing than others.

Although many people complain that they can't get organizations to pick up their contributions, Goodwill has collection centers placed in convenient sections of towns because it is the most economical way for them to pick up small items. Many agencies are not equipped to pick up big sofas or refrigerators. There is no market for certain refrigerators and they are cumbersome to handle. As for sofas, they are often unusable unless they are in good shape.

"When a sofa is offered, the contributor is asked whether it can be sold in its present condition. If so, it is picked up. Some items, such as pianos, are too difficult to handle. Most helpers on trucks are handicapped with disabilities that might be aggravated by such jobs," Harwood explained.

On the other hand, many Goodwills have upholstery shops and can repair sofas, even battered ones. In the Connecticut area they repair furniture and toasters and make minor repairs to lawnmowers and the like. Major repair work was given up mainly because the total cost had gotten completely out of hand, he said.

"For example, a lot of imported and mass manufactured furnishings do not stand up quality-wise. Much clothing made overseas is not as sturdy as our used American clothing and major repairs are often too time-consuming."

In the radio and television shop where five handicapped people work it has been found practical to repair only table televisions. People don't buy old consoles so Goodwill must watch how much time is invested in them, Harwood noted.

Their response to the growth of tag sales has been to divide their products into three categories: there are antiques and near antiques. There is the regular Goodwill merchandise that the majority of shoppers is seeking — household wares, shoes and so on. There are the objects that are called "as is" — items that need repair but have some marketable value — a metal outdoor chair that is rusty, "too good to throw away, but not too bad to fix up," so it can be sold as it is. Ditto pots and pans, a very popular category in the world of recycled household effects.

MoPac announces firms supplying cars, locomotives

ST. LOUIS — Firms selected to supply more than $63 million in new freight cars and locomotives for the Missouri Pacific System have been announced. The purchase of equipment, one of the largest single orders ever placed by MoPac, consists of 1,300 freight cars and 50 locomotives.

Included in the orders are: Four hundred double-door boxcars of 100-ton capacity, to be built by ACF Industries at St. Louis; 350 covered hopper cars, of 100-ton capacity, of which 300 will be built by Pullman-Standard Co. at Butler, Pa., and 50 by General American Transportation Co., East Chicago, Ind.; 350 insulated boxcars, of 70-ton capacity, to be built by Pacific Car & Foundry Co., Renton, Wash.

Two hundred fixed-end gondola cars, of 100-ton capacity, to be built by Thrall Car Manufacturing Co. at Chicago; 40 diesel locomotives, of 1,500 horsepower to be built by the Electro-Motive Division of General Motors Corp. at LaGrange, Ill.; and 10 diesel locomotives, of 2,250 HP, to be built by General Electric Co. at Erie, Pa.

Delivery of this equipment will start in early 1977. Since 1961, when MoPac began an intensive plant modernization and equipment expansion program, the railroad has purchased 31,000 new freight cars, equal to more than half its freight car fleet, and 800 locomotives, about 75 per cent of its motive power fleet, at a cost of $750 million.

Wheat planting time is just around the corner

By JOHN D. GARRETT
Area agronomy specialist

BENTON — Wheat planting time is just around the corner so better start getting things ready. The recent rain should be adequate to get wheat and rye up and growing. We expect to see a big acreage planted this fall. Oct. 15 is the average Hessian Fly free date in this area. Wheat planted in September will often encounter some fly damage. Oct. 1 is plenty early to begin planting. However, if you plan to graze wheat, it can be planted in September. Arthur 71 is resistant to Hessian Fly so you may want to plant it. This is the only advantage of Arthur 71 over some of the other popular varieties.

A lot of wheat will be planted in soybeans and cotton with an airplane. If you plan to use this method, be sure to sow the seed before the leaves drop. Plant at least 2 bushels per acre. Soil should be either dry or wet. Dry soil has been plentiful the past 2 months.

One disadvantage of this method is that no starter fertilizer can be applied. This will be more serious on soybean ground than cotton. Phosphate and potash should be topdressed soon as the cotton or soybeans are harvested. Apply enough of these two nutrients to supply the wheat and soybean needs. If wheat is to be grazed, apply 30 to 40 lbs. of actual nitrogen this fall.

Arthur has been the most popular variety grown in Southeast Missouri. However, it will be replaced with Arthur 71. Arthur 71 has averaged 39 bushels per acre the past 6 years in variety trials at Portageville. Yields for a few other popular varieties are as follows: Oasis-36; Stoddard-41; Coker 68-15-44 bu.; Abe-41; McNair 4823-46 bu.; and Double Crop-37. Double crop is a new variety released by Arkansas. It is 5 to 7 days earlier than most other varieties. Seed will be limited and expensive this year. You will note from the above that some varieties have averaged 3 to 7 bushels per acre more than Arthur 71.

Do your best to test the soil before wheat is planted. Phosphate, potash, and limestone do a better job if they are plowed down and worked into the soil. A fertilizer application of 10 to 15 lbs. nitrogen and 30 to 50 lbs. phosphate and potash will get wheat off to a good start. This is a good program to follow if you do not have a current soil test.

In the event you do not get limestone and fertilizer applied before wheat is planted, all three can be topdressed with no adverse effects. The wheat should be dry when fertilizer is topdressed. Fertilizer and limestone applied in this manner is not as effective as plowed down or disced in, but it is much better than none at all. When the wheat is harvested and stubble turned under the fertilizer will be ready for the soybeans to follow.

Since about all of our wheat is followed by soybeans, adequate phosphate and potash should be applied to the wheat for both wheat and soybeans. Remember, both crops are removing fertilizer and it must be replaced or soils will become deficient. Many soybean fields showed evidence of potash deficiency this summer. Soybeans remove about 0.8 lbs. P2O5 and 1.4 lb K2O per bushel.

	Wheat 60 bu.-Acre	Beans 30 bu-acre	Total
Nutrient
P2O5	33	24	57
K2O	20	42	62

It can be seen that nutrient removal in the grain alone is higher than what many wheat crops are fertilized with.

Van Regenmartar rejoins faculty at SeMo State

CAPE GIRARDEAU — When you have the opportunity to employ one of the top certified public accountants in the country, you grab him.

Or at least that's what Southeast Missouri State University did, in effect, in the case of Dr. Robert Van Regenmorter, who rejoined the faculty this fall after previously teaching at the university from 1966 to 1969.

With more than 33,000 candidates taking the CPA exam when he took it, Van Regenmorter had the top score in Tennessee and one of the top 50 scores in the United States.

Understandably, he is teaching accounting classes at Southeast Missouri State. But he is also teaching graduate tax courses, and taxes are really his area of special interest.

A charter member of the American Tax Association, Van Regenmorter has published several articles in national accounting and tax journals, and he has presented professional papers at regional and national accounting conventions.

On Oct. 20, he will be one of the featured speakers at the fifth annual Accounting Day Seminar, sponsored by the Southeast Missouri State department of accounting and finance. The meeting will begin with registration at 9:45 a.m. and adjourn at 3:45 p.m. It will be held in Grauel Language Arts Building.

Van Regenmorter will speak on current tax developments and reform proposals at 10:40 a.m. Afternoon speakers at the seminar will be Marybelle Mueller, attorney and probate judge of Cape Girardeau County, and Mike Harmon, audit manager of Price Waterhouse & Co.

Spotlight in '76 election may be presidential but AP takes a look at local issues for Nov.

By The Associated Press

The spotlight in the 1976 election is on the presidential race, but voters in November also will be deciding close-to-home questions involving everything from nuclear safety to state-regulated slot machines.

Some of the proposals are in the form of constitutional amendments offered by state legislatures. Others have been placed on the ballot as a result of voter initiatives and petition drives.

An Associated Press spot check showed that the nuclear safety issue has generated the most interest, followed by proposals to ban or restrict nonreturnable beverage containers.

California residents voted against a proposal on the June primary ballot to limit development of nuclear power plants and impose restrictions on the operation of those already in existence.

There are about 60 atomic power plants already in operation and another 40 plants are expected in operation by 1980. Critics of nuclear power say that safety controls are not strict enough.

The proposals under consideration would:

—Provide for safe storage, transportation and disposal of nuclear wastes.

—Require legislative approval of all new plants.

The outcome of the vote is expected to be close in most states and both sides have been fighting hard. Opponents of the measure in the State of Washington have a fund of more than $340,000, but a poll published by the Seattle Times in August showed 44.1 per cent of those surveyed were for the measure, 23.9 per cent were against and 32 per cent were undecided.

RETURNABLE BOTTLES AND CANS

Massachusetts, Maine and Michigan are among the states trying to limit the use of nonreturnable containers. Under the Maine proposal, which is typical, all beer, ale and soft drink containers sold in the state after Jan. 1, 1978 would have to have at least a five-cent deposit. Cans with flip-top openers would be banned, as would plastic rings used to hold the cans or bottles together in a six-pack.

UTILITIES

Voters in some states will decide on measures that could affect electric and gas bills. In Massachusetts, a proposal would require the same per-kilowatt charge for all customers in contrast to the current practice of lower rates for big users. The governor and the state Department of Public Utilities contend that the measure would hurt industry. Ohioans for Utility Reform — OUR is pushing a measure requiring utilities to offer low-cost "lifeline" rates, with a minimum charge for a minimum amount of power. A measure on the ballot in Missouri would prevent utilities from including construction work in progress as one of the ongoing costs in figuring rate increases. Supporters of the measure say it's not the job of a utility customer to finance long-range construction projects.

GAMBLING

Legalized gambling of one form or another is under consideration in several states. The biggest fight has been in New Jersey where there is a proposal to okay casino gambling in Atlantic City. Two years ago, a plan for casino gambling throughout the state was rejected by a 3-2 margin. The Eagleton Institute of Politics of Rutgers University said a late-September poll showed 59 per cent of those questioned favored the proposal, 36 were against and the rest were undecided. In Delaware, the issue is whether the voters favor state-regulated slot machines. In California, the controversy is over greyhound racing. And in Oregon, a proposal on the ballot would allow charitable, fraternal and religious organizations to run bingo games.

SPENDING—MONEY

Two measures on the Michigan ballot specifically deal with money. One would limit state spending to 8.3 per cent of total personal income in the state; the other would remove the state's constitutional prohibition on a graduated income tax. Massachusetts voters also will decide whether to permit a graduated income tax — an idea that has been turned down three times in recent years. In Missouri, there are proposals to increase the state's sales tax by an eighth of a cent, but remove it from food and prescription drugs. North Dakota voters are faced with a plan to reduce the sales tax from 4 to 3 per cent. The drive is led by a businessman critical of the state's $180 million general fund surplus.

GOVERNMENT REORGANIZATION

Jimmy Carter has made his reorganization of the Georgia government a key issue in the presidential campaign. Another kind of reorganization — involving the state constitution — is on the November ballot. A key proposal would rearrange the constitution to put similar subjects under the same articles. Officials say it would be the first step toward an article-by-article constitutional revision in the future. Another measure on the Georgia ballot would allow a governor to succeed himself for a second four-year term. In Montana, residents of 156 counties, cities and towns will vote on proposals for new forms of local government. The new ideas generally would increase power at the local level.

STATE CAPITAL

The biggest issue on the Alaska ballot is where to put the state capital. Alaskans voted in 1974 to move it from Juneau and created a commission to propose three alternative sites. The choices: Willow, about 70 miles north of Anchorage and the cheapest of the three to develop; Mount Yenlo, a wilderness area 100 miles north of Anchorage and the second cheapest to develop; and Larson Lake, 120 miles north of Anchorage and the most expensive in development costs.

MISCELLANEOUS

Oklahoma residents have another chance to vote on legalizing the sale of liquor by the drink; an Equal Rights Amendment to the state constitution and a ban on the ownership of most handguns are on the ballot in Massachusetts; and a Florida measure would strengthen the state's financial disclosure law for public officials.

Rural Missourians receive $181 million in loans

COLUMBIA— Loans and guarantees totaling approximately $181 million were made to citizens of rural Missouri during fiscal year 1976, John O. Foster, state director for the Farmers Home Administration, has announced.

The supervised funding programs of FmHA, a credit agency of the United States Department of Agriculture, comprise four major areas: farmer programs, rural housing, community programs and business and industry.

In summing up the year, Foster said over $95 million was used to assist Missouri farmers with various programs, among them farm ownership, operating, youth, soil and water and guaranteed emergency livestock loans.

Farm ownership loans made in cooperation with other lenders has greatly increased the past few years. In this program, FmHA enlists assistance of other lenders to make part of a farm ownership loan, with FmHA lending the balance necessary to complete the transaction.

During fiscal year 1976 private lenders provided nearly $25 million to supplement FmHA farm ownership loans which reached the $18 million figure. By the use of outside credit, FmHA was able to assist many more Missouri farmers than otherwise would have been possible.

Rural housing credit is made available through FmHA in rural towns up to 20,000 population as well as open country. During the period July 1, 1975 through June 30, 1976, over $53 million was channeled into construction, purchasing or improving homes for Missouri's rural residents of low and moderate incomes.

An additional $12.5 million accounted for 60 rural rental community housing projects and expansions to projects already in existence. Such a program represents progress in meeting a particular need of senior citizens in Missouri's rural communities, Foster said.

Approximately $13 million was spent to assist in modernizing Missouri's small towns and rural areas. About 10,650 families will benefit directly from new or expanded water, sewer and waste disposal systems. More than $3 million of this amount was loaned for essential community facilities, such as expansion and remodeling of hospitals, fire stations and fire trucks.

The basic purpose of the Business and Industrial Loan Program, Foster said, is to develop or finance business or industry and increase employment. Last year, FmHA guaranteed loans totaling over $8 million to further business enterprises in rural Missouri and towns for such projects as farm machinery dealers, warehouse, nursing homes, manufacturing facilities, poultry processing and grain elevators.

Improved quality of rural life is an end result of rural development, Foster said. The upgrading of economic environment will make material contribution to better living for rural Missourians.

FmHA credit supplements other credit normally available in rural areas. It is extended through Missouri's 69 local county offices. Foster pointed out that all programs administered by the Farmers Home Administration are conducted on a nondiscriminatory basis.

Economist feel current economic weakness is a phase in recovery

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Association of Business Economists seems to think the current economic weakness is merely a pause in the recovery, but that a more pronounced slowing of growth might occur a year from now.

The 1977 consensus forecast is for continued expansion at a fairly even rate "at least through the second or third quarter," but accompanied by a sharp, 10 per cent rise in the Consumer Price Index.

"Curiously," they announced, "the consensus forecasts a continuous decline in the unemployment rate throughout the year 1977."

Meeting in San Francisco, the economists announced that an analysis of their forecasts showed them to be expecting a 1977 final-quarter decline in the rate of increase in real Gross National Product, profits, housing starts and spending for personal big ticket items.

The economists, whose forecasts were made more than a month ago, have had an uneven record. While they credit themselves with a fairly good forecast for 1976, the one for the preceding year, in their words, "is better forgotten."

—Gross National Product in current dollars will rise from $1,697,000,00 in 1976 to $1,855,-600,000 in 1977. Those figures, however, included inflation.

Using 1972 dollars so as to measure both years by the same standard, the economists expect growth to be from $1,-268,000,000 in 1976 to $1,332,700,-000 in 1977.

—Consumer Price Index. "Our forecast of the Consumer Price Index provides an insight to how our respondents have built inflation into their forecasts." The peak inflation is forecast for the second and third quarters.

—Profits. Corporate profits before taxes are forecast to rise to $166.9 billion from $148 billion in 1976. That would be a 12.8 per cent increase.

The economists expect that profits will strengthen during the second and third quarters of 1977, followed by a marked decline in growth during the final three months.

—Industrial production. The rate of growth will tend to rise through the second quarter of 1977. "A marked decline in the rate of increase is forecast thereafter."

—Private housing starts are expected to grow only slightly in the first quarter, more strongly in the second quarter, rather weakly in the third quarter, and to decline, in absolute terms, in the final quarter of 1977.

—Unemployment. The forecast is for a 6.8 per cent rate in 1977, compared with an estimated 7.5 per cent in 1976.

The consensus of the economists is that the rate will decline in the fourth quarter of this year and that the decline will continue through each quarter of 1977.

174 are running for president in '76

WASHINGTON (AP) — Of the 174 people running for president, you probably hear the most about Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter. But if you're looking for something different, check the platforms of Ernest Whitford, Paul Trent, Eddie Collins or Paul T. Lanyhow.

Or if you are attracted by persistence, you might like Lar Daly, who's making his seventh try for the White House, or Gus Hall, perennial Communist party presidential candidate.

The names of most candidates for president aren't likely to turn up on any ballots on Nov. 2. But they are on file at the Federal Election Commission, which dutifully records the minor along with the major candidates.

There are candidates, other than Carter and Ford, whose names will appear on many state ballots. They include former Sen. Eugene McCarthy, an independent; former Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox, the American Independent party candidate; Tom Anderson, the American party candidate: and Roger MacBride, the Liberation party nominee.

The only tax reform that interests MacBride is abolition of the income tax, something he views as a long-range goal of a MacBride administration. More immediately he would abolish the CIA and FBI and the Federal Reserve System.

MacBride also advocates repeal of laws against what he calls victimless crimes such as gambling and smoking marijuana.

"Rather than eliminate tax loopholes, we should all learn to use them," says Trent.

When he's not advocating use of tax loopholes, Trent often is boosting male chauvinism. "I like broads," says the candidate. "I want to turn women on to politics."

Spotlight in '76 election may be presidential but AP takes a look at local issues for Nov.

By The Associated Press

The spotlight in the 1976 election is on the presidential race, but voters in November also will be deciding close-to-home questions involving everything from nuclear safety to state-regulated slot machines.

Some of the proposals are in the form of constitutional amendments offered by state legislatures. Others have been placed on the ballot as a result of voter initiatives and petition drives.

An Associated Press spot check showed that the nuclear safety issue has generated the most interest, followed by proposals to ban or restrict nonreturnable beverage containers.

California residents voted against a proposal on the June primary ballot to limit development of nuclear power plants and impose restrictions on the operation of those already in existence.

Similar measures now are on the ballot in a number of states, including Oregon, Montana, Ohio, Washington and Arizona.

There are about 60 atomic power plants already in operation and another 40 plants are expected in operation by 1980. Critics of nuclear power say that safety controls are not strict enough.

The proposals under consideration would:

—Set specific safety standards for builders.

—Provide for safe storage, transportation and disposal of nuclear wastes.

—Require legislative approval of all new plants.

—Urge Congress to suspend the limit on liability insurance in case of nuclear accidents.

The outcome of the vote is expected to be close in most states and both sides have been fighting hard. Opponents of the measure in the State of Washington have a fund of more than $340,000, but a poll published by the Seattle Times in August showed 44.1 per cent of those surveyed were for the measure, 23.9 per cent were against and 32 per cent were undecided.

RETURNABLE BOTTLES AND CANS

Massachusetts, Maine and Michigan are among the states trying to limit the use of nonreturnable containers. Under the Maine proposal, which is typical, all beer, ale and soft drink containers sold in the state after Jan. 1, 1978 would have to have at least a five-cent deposit. Cans with flip-top openers would be banned, as would plastic rings used to hold the cans or bottles together in a six-pack.

UTILITIES

Voters in some states will decide on measures that could affect electric and gas bills. In Massachusetts, a proposal would require the same per-kilowatt charge for all customers in contrast to the current practice of lower rates for big users. The governor and the state Department of Public Utilities contend that the measure would hurt industry. Ohioans for Utility Reform — OUR is pushing a measure requiring utilities to offer low-cost "lifeline" rates, with a minimum charge for a minimum amount of power. A measure on the ballot in Missouri would prevent utilities from including construction work in progress as one of the ongoing costs in figuring rate increases. Supporters of the measure say it's not the job of a utility customer to finance long-range construction projects.

GAMBLING

Legalized gambling of one form or another is under consideration in several states. The biggest fight has been in New Jersey where there is a proposal to okay casino gambling in Atlantic City. Two years ago, a plan for casino gambling throughout the state was rejected by a 3-2 margin. The Eagleton Institute of Politics of Rutgers University said a late-September poll showed 59 per cent of those questioned favored the proposal, 36 were against and the rest were undecided. In Delaware, the issue is whether the voters favor state-regulated slot machines. In California, the controversy is over greyhound racing. And in Oregon, a proposal on the ballot would allow charitable, fraternal and religious organizations to run bingo games.

SPENDING—MONEY

Two measures on the Michigan ballot specifically deal with money. One would limit state spending to 8.3 per cent of total personal income in the state; the other would remove the state's constitutional prohibition on a graduated income tax. Massachusetts voters also will decide whether to permit a graduated income tax — an idea that has been turned down three times in recent years. In Missouri, there are proposals to increase the state's sales tax by an eighth of a cent, but remove it from food and prescription drugs. North Dakota voters are faced with a plan to reduce the sales tax from 4 to 3 per cent. The drive is led by a businessman critical of the state's $180 million general fund surplus.

GOVERNMENT REORGANIZATION

Jimmy Carter has made his reorganization of the Georgia government a key issue in the presidential campaign. Another kind of reorganization — involving the state constitution — is on the November ballot. A key proposal would rearrange the constitution to put similar subjects under the same articles. Officials say it would be the first step toward an article-by-article constitutional revision in the future. Another measure on the Georgia ballot would allow a governor to succeed himself for a second four-year term. In Montana, residents of 156 counties, cities and towns will vote on proposals for new forms of local government. The new ideas generally would increase power at the local level.

STATE CAPITAL

The biggest issue on the Alaska ballot is where to put the state capital. Alaskans voted in 1974 to move it from Juneau and created a commission to propose three alternative sites. The choices: Willow, about 70 miles north of Anchorage and the cheapest of the three to develop; Mount Yenlo, a wilderness area 100 miles north of Anchorage and the second cheapest to develop; and Larson Lake, 120 miles north of Anchorage and the most expensive in development costs.

MISCELLANEOUS

Oklahoma residents have another chance to vote on legalizing the sale of liquor by the drink; an Equal Rights Amendment to the state constitution and a ban on the ownership of most handguns are on the ballot in Massachusetts; and a Florida measure would strengthen the state's financial disclosure law for public officials.

The biggest war movie of them all

By Dick Kleiner

DEVENTER, Holland — (NEA) — When you make a big war movie, you can find yourself in the airplane business.

That's what's happened to Joseph Levine, who is producing the biggest war movie of them all, "A Bridge Too Far." The film, based on the late Cornelius Ryan's best-seller, is a factual account of one of the great battles of World War II, an Allied defeat.

It's the story of an airborne attack on a key bridge. It was a heroic but futile affair. The producers couldn't use the actual bridge because today the surroundings have become too modern. So they were using another bridge and various locales in and around this ancient, picturesque city about 100 kilometers from Amsterdam.

One of the biggest casts in years has been assembled for this one — Dirk Bogarde, James Caan, Michael Caine, Sean Connery, Elliott Gould, Gene Hackman, Laurence Olivier, Ryan O'Neal, Robert Redford and on and on.

But there is no one main star. If there is a star, it is the equipment. The planes, the tanks, the parachutes. This is a film about a battle and in a battle it's the hardware that counts.

"Finding authentic aircraft," says associate producer John Palmer, "is difficult. We've had to buy four Dakotas — two from Djibouti, two from Portugal. We had to buy them, then modify them to meet governmental standards so we could fly them today.

"The result is that there's a lot of interest from people who want to buy them back. We could make a good profit, because we've brought them up to a high standard."

MAKING WAR for the movies, director Richard Attenborough (right) instructs Ryan O'Neal, playing General James Gavin, in a scene for "A Bridge Too Far."

"At $25 million," he says, "it isn't the most expensive film ever made, but it is the most expensive ever planned. There have been a few that cost more, but they were budgeted at less."

When I was visiting, they were shooting at Deelen Air Base, near here, a base built by the Nazis during the war but now being used by the Dutch Air Force. I can't tell you exactly what was being shot, because they pledged me to secrecy, but I can give you a few small hints.

They waited until the heide — the Dutch equivalent of heather — was in bloom to film this sequence I can't tell you about. But it was a tough one, physically, especially on the star of the sequence, Ryan O'Neal.

"I'm very nervous about this thing," O'Neal said. "I don't like doing something where if you screw up you get killed.

"You know, pretending is getting harder all the time. It used to be that we'd do shots like this in process on the back lot. But look at me today."

Backing O'Neal up were regular soldiers of the Dutch Army. And several of Levine's fleet of Dakota planes. It took all day to do it, and do it right.

Also involved were men of the A.P.A. That's a very special outfit — Attenborough's Private Army. Richard Attenborough is the director. Sir Richard Attenborough is his official name, but everybody calls him Dickie.

I rode back from Deelen to Deventer with Dickie and he told me about the A.P.A. It's a unique idea for a war film.

"I wanted some actors to play some key roles as soldiers," he said, "because I wanted to show the effect of war on particular individuals over a period of a campaign.

"But the problem was that today's young actors — today's young men in general — have had no military training. So I got 50 young actors and put them in a barracks and gave them three weeks of training. We're using them throughout the film."

Attenborough says this film will represent about two years of his life. It was about a year in the preparatory stage, the shooting schedule is six months and there will be another six months of post-production.

"This is a film that couldn't have been done without adequate planning," he says. "Every detail was worked out before we began to shoot. The money from Levine was committed before the script was written.

"Levine is the last of the giants. He has given me everyone I wanted and everything I wanted."

Levine is gigantic, in everything but stature. He's a short, rotund man, but he thinks big.

"I financed this whole film myself," he says. "The picture should finish at $24 to $25 million. After I got this great cast, I could get anyone I wanted to take the distribution rights.

"But, until then, I was alone out there for a year — with guarantees of $19 million on the line. I got a little nervous for a while. I'm rich, but not that rich."

It's the kind of film — all outdoors, all location — where a few bad breaks in the weather could have been disastrous. But the Eastern European drought, wreaking havoc to farmers and citizens, has been a help to moviemakers. There has been very little problem with weather.

The result is that the film is on-schedule and on-budget. In fact, Michael Caine reported and told everyone, with a tone of wonder in his voice, "Four months ago, they said I should report on August 8 — and here it is August 8 and I'm reporting. That's uncanny."

Still, the logistics of a picture of this sort are amazing. Levine surveyed the scene and said, "Just today, I have to feed 700 people — breakfast, mid-breakfast, lunch and tea, if you please. An hour after lunch and I have to give 700 guys a spot of tea."

But he believes he has a winner in "A Bridge Too Far."

Best-known measure of the market takes dip to lowest level

NEW YORK (AP) — If the recent poor showing of the stock market is any guide, American investors' hopes for economic recovery have undergone a bit of a shakeup lately.

The best-known measure of stock price trends, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, fell 11.56 points Monday to 940.82 — its lowest level in nearly nine months.

It was the indicator's ninth loss in the past 10 trading days, producing a net drop of 72.31 points — which translates roughly into a loss of $60 billion-$70 billion in total market value of all stocks.

And it added up to the Dow's biggest sustained decline since an 87-point drop in a seven-week period in the summer of 1975.

Then, as now, analysts noted that investors were reacting uneasily to signs of a slowdown in the economy's recoverq from the recession of 1974 and early 1975.

The start of the market's most recent skid coincided, in fact, with the government's report on Sept. 28 that its index of leading economic indicators — designed as a kind of economic crystal ball — had turned downward for the first time in a year and a half.

Since then, the selling has continued amid widespread reductions in Wall Street estimates of how well the economy in general, and corporate earnings in particular, performed in the third quarter of the year ended 12 days ago.

Heinz H. Biel, a longtime market-watcher with the Wall Street firm of Hoppin, Watson Inc., noted that stock markets in other major industrial countries such as West Germany and England also have been suffering.

"It's not just our economy, but others, that have slowed down lately," he observed. "There is uncertainty whether the recovery is all over or whether the pace has just slowed down."

With the presidential election in this country only three weeks off, politics also is very much on Wall Streeters' minds.

Though statistical studies have shown that the market doesn't necessarily do better under Republican presidents than Democratic ones, it nevertheless has traditionally had a Republican bias.

Whether accurately or not, most analysts agree, President Ford is seen by many in the financial community as more of a potential friend to business over the next four years than Jimmy Carter.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The race for lieutenant governor has begun heating up as the Republican and Democratic candidates accused each other of having conflicts of interest and both issued swift denials.

GOP incumbent William Phelps claimed in a St. Louis news conference on Tuesday that his opponent, House Speaker Richard Rabbitt was improperly benefiting from urban redevelopment tax breaks through land Rabbitt owns in St. Louis. But Rabbitt called the charge "completely wrong."

Phelps claimed Rabbitt was instrumental in the establishment of 4300 Forest Park Redevelopment Corp. several years ago for the redevelopment of the 4300 block of Forest Park Boulevard. That block includes six parcels of land owned by Rabbitt, including his own home, his mother's home, two rental flats and two vacant lots.

The redevelopment project, approved by the city last year, calls for rehabilitation of 10 homes and the construction of two apartment buildings. Its improvements have been estimated at $1.1 million.

Under the redevelopment law, those improvements would be exempt from property taxes for 10 years and subject to only 50 per cent of the taxes for the next 15 years.

Phelps, claiming the exemption of improvements on both Rabbitt's property and other property in the area would cost the city more than $350,000 in uncollected future tax revenues. said, "This is a state official getting tax benefits under state law. It's a clear conflict of interest."

Rabbitt, however, called the charge a "purely political thing," contending the lieutenant governor did not understand the redevelopment law.

"I have not received one penny tax break and do not anticipate receiving any tax break in the future," the speaker said in a telephone interview.

Rural Missourians receive $181 million in loans

COLUMBIA— Loans and guarantees totaling approximately $181 million were made to citizens of rural Missouri during fiscal year 1976, John O. Foster, state director for the Farmers Home Administration, has announced.

The supervised funding programs of FmHA, a credit agency of the United States Department of Agriculture, comprise four major areas: farmer programs, rural housing, community programs and business and industry.

Among major farmer programs, emergency credit for Missouri farmers suffering losses from natural disasters amounted to over $46 million.

In summing up the year, Foster said over $95 million was used to assist Missouri farmers with various programs, among them farm ownership, operating, youth, soil and water and guaranteed emergency livestock loans.

Farm ownership loans made in cooperation with other lenders has greatly increased the past few years. In this program, FmHA enlists assistance of other lenders to make part of a farm ownership loan, with FmHA lending the balance necessary to complete the transaction.

During fiscal year 1976 private lenders provided nearly $25 million to supplement FmHA farm ownership loans which reached the $18 million figure. By the use of outside credit, FmHA was able to assist many more Missouri farmers than otherwise would have been possible.

Rural housing credit is made available through FmHA in rural towns up to 20,000 population as well as open country. During the period July 1, 1975 through June 30, 1976, over $53 million was channeled into construction, purchasing or improving homes for Missouri's rural residents of low and moderate incomes.

Equity in farm property continues to climb

WASHINGTON (AP) — The equity that owners of American farms held in their property last year "continued to climb as the increase in the value of assets outran the rise in debt against the assets," a new Agriculture Department study says.

Equity on Jan. 1 this year totalled $494.8 billion in current dollars which was more than the total inflated assets were worth just two years before, the study reported.

The annual study, called "Balance Sheet of the Farming Sector" and prepared by five men from the Economic Research Service, only mentions in passing the various national farm policies that prevailed during the two periods.

Calculating the asset value using constant 1967 dollars, the value has risen 21.6 per cent since the end of World War II. In current dollars, the report said, the value of farm assets increased 12 per cent in 1975 to a total of $585.4 billion.

On the other side of the ledger, outstanding farm debt increased 11 per cent in current dollars to $90.6 billion. Figures in 1967 dollars were not given, but the report said the change was "about the average rise of the past.

By way of Jan. 1 comparisons, using 1967 dollars, total U.S. farm assets were valued at $207.2 billion in 1940, $225.5 billion in 1945, $240.6 billion in 1950, $257.8 billion in 1955, $261.4 billion in 1960, $265.1 billion in 1965 and $273.6 billion in 1970.

"Farm real estate was again the prime mover in the asset-value increase, accounting for 80 per cent of the total rise," the report on 1975 said.

Charts showed that the average per-acre value of farm real estate increased 14 per cent in the 48 continental states between March 1975 and February 1976. The value was unchanged in Georgia but rose elsewhere by a range of from 1 per cent in Mississippi to 26 per cent in Iowa and Nebraska.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Crop Reporting Board projects that farmers will produce 3 per cent more of the 14 major fresh-market fall vegetables this year than they did last October, November and December.

Reporting on fall-quarter intentions, the board said that the prospective area for harvest is 226,750 acres, an increase of one per cent. Based on average yields, that should priduce 43.5 million hundredweight, it said.

Among the vegetables, greater production than a year ago is expected for broccoli, cabbage, carrots, celery, sweet corn and green peppers. Decreases were indicated for snap beans, cauliflower, cucumbers, eggplant, escarole, lettuce, spinach and tomatoes.

In its final forecast of summer onion production, the board estimated a harvest of 16.9 million hundredweight or 1.69 billion pounds. That would be 20 per cent greater than in 1975 and 2 per cent more than it thought a month ago.

ALAMOSA, Colo. (AP) — At least four whooping cranes, the fragile fruit of an experiment to save an all-but-vanished species, are safely migrating south to winter nests, a wildlife expert says.

Charles Bryant, manager of the Monte Vista National Wildlife Refuge, said Sunday that two whoopers hatched from Canadian eggs this spring by sandhill crane foster parents and two yearlings have been sighted in Colorado.

A fifth has already arrived at its New Mexico wintering spot, a sixth is still at its Idaho birthplace, and a seventh is believed safely an route. An eighth whooper died Sunday.

It's the second year in a row the carefully nurtured cranes have undertaken their migration. The last native United States whooping cranes were sighted in the late 1940s. They vanished, partly because their size of up to five feet made them easy prey for hunters.

The birds are on their way with their foster relatives to New Mexico from the Gray's Lake National Wildlife Refuge in Idaho.

The whoopers, white with a red head and black wingtips and noted for their loud whoops, are the product of a joint effort by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Canadian Wildlife Service to create a new flock of the species.

"As far as the birds raising and this type of thing and following what we thought would be a true migration, it's a success," Bryant said of the experiment, conceived by Dr. Rod Drewien, a research biologist and crane expert at the University of Idaho.

"But what will happen in time, whether they'll pair off and have young and establish a new population of whoopers, we're looking at four to seven years" before finding out, Bryant said.

In the spring of 1975, Drewien and other biologists removed more than a dozen eggs from whooper nests at Canada's Wood Buffalo National Park and placed them in sandhill nests in Idaho. At the time, the 49 birds at Wood Buffalo were the only known wild whoopers in existence.

This year, more eggs were moved to the sandhill area, and scientists again are watching whoopers follow the sandhill migration route, far to the west of the one used by the other whoopers. The birds raised in Canada migrate south through Kansas and eastern Colorado and then south to Texas, Bryant said.

The experiment suffered a slight setback Sunday when one of the birds hatched this year died several days after flying into a fence.

"We knew about it Thursday," Bryant said. "We wanted to try and leave the bird with adults as long as we could. This morning it became obvious it was not going to be able to recover so we sent it to the vet," where the bird died.

Hearnes seeks release of federal document on investigation into finances

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes has sought the release of federal documents concerning the investigation into his finances.

Hearnes filed a motion Friday in federal court here asking U.S. District Judge John F. Nangle to order the records released prior to the Nov. 2 election.

Hearnes, running against Republican Attorney General John C. Danforth for the U.S. Senate, told Nangle that the information should be released "because of the overriding public interest in this case."

The former governor acknowledged in the motion that he has already received 18 of the 27 documents he had sought but he did not identify those he is still seeking.

The U.S. Attorney's office in Kansas City conducted the investigation over the past few years. The IRS has discontinued its criminal investigation but the government has not said whether Hearnes was exonerated.

The government has fought the release of the records, saying that Hearnes is not legally entitled to them.

The biggest war movie of them all

By Dick Kleiner

DEVENTER, Holland — (NEA) — When you make a big war movie, you can find yourself in the airplane business.

That's what's happened to Joseph Levine, who is producing the biggest war movie of them all, "A Bridge Too Far." The film, based on the late Cornelius Ryan's best-seller, is a factual account of one of the great battles of World War II, an Allied defeat.

It's the story of an airborne attack on a key bridge. It was a heroic but futile affair. The producers couldn't use the actual bridge because today the surroundings have become too modern. So they were using another bridge and various locales in and around this ancient, picturesque city about 100 kilometers from Amsterdam.

One of the biggest casts in years has been assembled for this one — Dirk Bogarde, James Caan, Michael Caine, Sean Connery, Elliott Gould, Gene Hackman, Laurence Olivier, Ryan O'Neal, Robert Redford and on and on.

But there is no one main star. If there is a star, it is the equipment. The planes, the tanks, the parachutes. This is a film about a battle and in a battle it's the hardware that counts.

"Finding authentic aircraft," says associate producer John Palmer, "is difficult. We've had to buy four Dakotas — two from Djibouti, two from Portugal. We had to buy them, then modify them to meet governmental standards so we could fly them today.

"The result is that there's a lot of interest from people who want to buy them back. We could make a good profit, because we've brought them up to a high standard."

Every penny helps, because "A Bridge Too Far" is a very expensive film — in fact, Levine says, it is the most expensive film ever planned.

MAKING WAR for the movies, director Richard Attenborough (right) instructs Ryan O'Neal, playing General James Gavin, in a scene for "A Bridge Too Far."

"At $25 million," he says, "it isn't the most expensive film ever made, but it is the most expensive ever planned. There have been a few that cost more, but they were budgeted at less."

When I was visiting, they were shooting at Deelen Air Base, near here, a base built by the Nazis during the war but now being used by the Dutch Air Force. I can't tell you exactly what was being shot, because they pledged me to secrecy, but I can give you a few small hints.

They waited until the heide — the Dutch equivalent of heather — was in bloom to film this sequence I can't tell you about. But it was a tough one, physically, especially on the star of the sequence, Ryan O'Neal.

"I'm very nervous about this thing," O'Neal said. "I don't like doing something where if you screw up you get killed.

"You know, pretending is getting harder all the time. It used to be that we'd do shots like this in process on the back lot. But look at me today."

Backing O'Neal up were regular soldiers of the Dutch Army. And several of Levine's fleet of Dakota planes. It took all day to do it, and do it right.

Also involved were men of the A.P.A. That's a very special outfit — Attenborough's Private Army. Richard Attenborough is the director. Sir Richard Attenborough is his official name, but everybody calls him Dickie.

I rode back from Deelen to Deventer with Dickie and he told me about the A.P.A. It's a unique idea for a war film.

"I wanted some actors to play some key roles as soldiers," he said, "because I wanted to show the effect of war on particular individuals over a period of a campaign.

"But the problem was that today's young actors — today's young men in general — have had no military training. So I got 50 young actors and put them in a barracks and gave them three weeks of training. We're using them throughout the film."

Attenborough says this film will represent about two years of his life. It was about a year in the preparatory stage, the shooting schedule is six months and there will be another six months of post-production.

"This is a film that couldn't have been done without adequate planning," he says. "Every detail was worked out before we began to shoot. The money from Levine was committed before the script was written.

"Levine is the last of the giants. He has given me everyone I wanted and everything I wanted."

Levine is gigantic, in everything but stature. He's a short, rotund man, but he thinks big.

"I financed this whole film myself," he says. "The picture should finish at $24 to $25 million. After I got this great cast, I could get anyone I wanted to take the distribution rights.

"But, until then, I was alone out there for a year — with guarantees of $19 million on the line. I got a little nervous for a while. I'm rich, but not that rich."

It's the kind of film — all outdoors, all location — where a few bad breaks in the weather could have been disastrous. But the Eastern European drought, wreaking havoc to farmers and citizens, has been a help to moviemakers. There has been very little problem with weather.

The result is that the film is on-schedule and on-budget. In fact, Michael Caine reported and told everyone, with a tone of wonder in his voice, "Four months ago, they said I should report on August 8 — and here it is August 8 and I'm reporting. That's uncanny."

Still, the logistics of a picture of this sort are amazing. Levine surveyed the scene and said, "Just today, I have to feed 700 people — breakfast, mid-breakfast, lunch and tea, if you please. An hour after lunch and I have to give 700 guys a spot of tea."

But he believes he has a winner in "A Bridge Too Far."

Best-known measure of the market takes dip to lowest level

NEW YORK (AP) — If the recent poor showing of the stock market is any guide, American investors' hopes for economic recovery have undergone a bit of a shakeup lately.

The best-known measure of stock price trends, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, fell 11.56 points Monday to 940.82 — its lowest level in nearly nine months.

It was the indicator's ninth loss in the past 10 trading days, producing a net drop of 72.31 points — which translates roughly into a loss of $60 billion-$70 billion in total market value of all stocks.

And it added up to the Dow's biggest sustained decline since an 87-point drop in a seven-week period in the summer of 1975.

Then, as now, analysts noted that investors were reacting uneasily to signs of a slowdown in the economy's recoverq from the recession of 1974 and early 1975.

The start of the market's most recent skid coincided, in fact, with the government's report on Sept. 28 that its index of leading economic indicators — designed as a kind of economic crystal ball — had turned downward for the first time in a year and a half.

Since then, the selling has continued amid widespread reductions in Wall Street estimates of how well the economy in general, and corporate earnings in particular, performed in the third quarter of the year ended 12 days ago.

Heinz H. Biel, a longtime market-watcher with the Wall Street firm of Hoppin, Watson Inc., noted that stock markets in other major industrial countries such as West Germany and England also have been suffering.

"It's not just our economy, but others, that have slowed down lately," he observed. "There is uncertainty whether the recovery is all over or whether the pace has just slowed down."

With the presidential election in this country only three weeks off, politics also is very much on Wall Streeters' minds.

Though statistical studies have shown that the market doesn't necessarily do better under Republican presidents than Democratic ones, it nevertheless has traditionally had a Republican bias.

Whether accurately or not, most analysts agree, President Ford is seen by many in the financial community as more of a potential friend to business over the next four years than Jimmy Carter.

Lieutenant governor race is heating up

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The race for lieutenant governor has begun heating up as the Republican and Democratic candidates accused each other of having conflicts of interest and both issued swift denials.

GOP incumbent William Phelps claimed in a St. Louis news conference on Tuesday that his opponent, House Speaker Richard Rabbitt was improperly benefiting from urban redevelopment tax breaks through land Rabbitt owns in St. Louis. But Rabbitt called the charge "completely wrong."

Phelps claimed Rabbitt was instrumental in the establishment of 4300 Forest Park Redevelopment Corp. several years ago for the redevelopment of the 4300 block of Forest Park Boulevard. That block includes six parcels of land owned by Rabbitt, including his own home, his mother's home, two rental flats and two vacant lots.

The redevelopment project, approved by the city last year, calls for rehabilitation of 10 homes and the construction of two apartment buildings. Its improvements have been estimated at $1.1 million.

Under the redevelopment law, those improvements would be exempt from property taxes for 10 years and subject to only 50 per cent of the taxes for the next 15 years.

Phelps, claiming the exemption of improvements on both Rabbitt's property and other property in the area would cost the city more than $350,000 in uncollected future tax revenues. said, "This is a state official getting tax benefits under state law. It's a clear conflict of interest."

Rabbitt, however, called the charge a "purely political thing," contending the lieutenant governor did not understand the redevelopment law.

"I have not received one penny tax break and do not anticipate receiving any tax break in the future," the speaker said in a telephone interview.

Farm roundup

Equity in farm property continues to climb

WASHINGTON (AP) — The equity that owners of American farms held in their property last year "continued to climb as the increase in the value of assets outran the rise in debt against the assets," a new Agriculture Department study says.

Equity on Jan. 1 this year totalled $494.8 billion in current dollars which was more than the total inflated assets were worth just two years before, the study reported.

The annual study, called "Balance Sheet of the Farming Sector" and prepared by five men from the Economic Research Service, only mentions in passing the various national farm policies that prevailed during the two periods.
